Wins National Guernsey Queen Title

Millie Linde starts her reign

BY PAT KAUFFMAN

OXFORD — Millie Linde, Oxford, was crowned Sunday as the 1980 National Guernsey Queen.

South of Union in a valley reminiscent of her German ancestry, is the beloved Lindenhof Guernsey Farm, the new 1980 National Guernsey Queen calls home.

In Millie the Guernsey Breed has found a staunch supporter.

Millie had just returned from her big day in Rochester, Minnesota, and little yawns crept into her conversation. But weary as she was, her excitement over her new role, and her enthusiasm for her chosen breed was evident.

Millie was selected from a field of 14 contestants during the 103rd annual meeting of the American Guernsey Cattle Club.

For the past year, she reigned as the Pennsylvania Guernsey Queen. Although the last year has been a busy one for Millie who logged 30 events in her official capacity, the year to come will be even busier.

Already on her calendar are trips to Penn State in June to crown her PA successor; to Madison, Wisconsin, and the Dairy Expo in October; to New York for a field day in July; to the Eastern Shores Show in Springfield, Massachusetts; to a Virginia field day, July 9; and to next year's pageant in San Francisco.

While her love for the breed may have been inherited from her folks, Millie has cultured that love through her involvement in the home dairy operation and her studies in dairy science at the State University of New York at Cobleskill.

Millie's reasons for choosing this particular junior college become clear when she mentions they have a school herd of Guernseys.

Millie is 21, has three brothers, and is listed in Who's Who in American Junior Colleges. She was a member of the FFA during her senior year of high school, and vice-president of the livestock club, a member of the honor society and Collegiate Agriculture Leaders while at college.

Her participation in the contests was a result of an ad she saw in the Guernsey Journal for Pennsylvania participants last spring.

At the state contest last June, Millie emerged victorious and after a year of serving at fairs, shows and banquets, she traveled to Rochester leaving last Thursday for a long weekend of events. Her activities started with makeup and fashion advice from a beauty consultant. Then on Friday

Inter-State producers grumble over late milk checks

BY CURT HARLER

LANCASTER — Lancaster County members of Inter-State Milk Producers Cooperative tied up telephone lines across the county when milk checks did not hit the mailboxes as scheduled on Tuesday.

The problem was not with the Co-op's home office in Southampton. Rather, the delay was due to problems in the postal system.

By week's end, it appeared, all Inter-State shippers had received their full checks.

Only Inter-State shippers in areas with ZIP-codes beginning with 175 or 176 were affected. A spot check of producers in other ZIP-code areas showed delivery of the milk checks as expected on May 20.

Inter-State executives pointed out Thursday that the Co-op periodically has experienced problems with late checks in the Lancaster area over the past two years.

The latest trouble delayed delivery of checks to over 700 producers. In this time of tight cash flow, producers who did not find checks in the mailbox on May 20 immediately called neighbors who also were emptyhanded.

District Director Daniel Martin was flooded with calls on Wednesday when checks still did not arrive.

Inter-State said the checks were "caught in a postal cobweb."

The checks, the Co-op says, were mailed as usual in Southampton in special bags. They were picked up by the Southampton post office. From there they go to King of Prussia to be moved on to Lancaster.

Here, the Lancaster Post Office says, could be one spot which caused trouble.

If the mail bags were routed into Philadelphia, as much as two days could have been lost.

But Inter-State maintains that a "dock transfer" (where the mail is not sorted, just routed along) was made at the King of Prussia Post Office and the bags arrived in a timely fashion at Lancaster where they sat on the dock.

There is some question as Airport zoning still up in air

BY SHEILA MILLER

CAMPBELLTOWN — About a half dozen South Londonderry Township, Lebanon County farmers huddled in a small circle outside the doors of the township's municipal building late Wednesday evening.

They were rehashing the two and a half hour meeting they had just sat through with the Zoning Board and around 40 other township residents and interested people.

The farmers left the municipal building feeling frustrated. The local officials reached no decision on a case the farmers felt important — so important, they left their tractors idle to sit in a stuffy meeting room.

The meeting was called to once again review the pros and cons of a petition filed by Charles and Ada Reigle to revise the zoning regulations concerning their privately owned commercial airport.

On April 2 of this year, the same issue came before the local board of supervisors who tabled their decision until they received the recommendations of their local planning commission on the case.

Testimony at this past Wednesday's meeting was in the same vein as the April testimony. The airport owners presented their reasons for wanting the zoning changed, and local farmers voiced their opposition.

Standing before the group, Ada Reigle calmly presented a prepared statement, reviewing how the township neglected to zone their airport AP-1 in 1975, as the 1972 state law required. The airport is presently zoned R-1, low residential.

She explained how they had been advised by the Milk marketing machinery in motion

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

HARRISBURG — Machinery is already in motion that could lead to a referendum before year's end for a statewide mandatory milk marketing program.

The first step now underway in the lengthy process that could result in the referendum, according to James Sumner, director of the Bureau of Markets, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, is the holding or separate meetings with individual dairy cooperatives to get opinions on the referendum proposal.

The co-op sessions are part of a 30-day period being utilized to collect opinions and comments from dairymen and dairy organizations on provisions they favor in any marketing program.

These opinions are expected to be received until about mid-June.

After the various opinions and comments are collected and analyzed, plans will move ahead with the scheduling of an industry-wide meeting to begin preliminary consideration of a program.

This session may either be a single large central meeting or several regional meetings held in different parts of the state.

Target date for the industry meeting is sometime in July.

The next step in the process would be the formation of an advisory council of dairy industry representatives to develop a specific proposal for the use of funds collected from milk producers under the marketing program.

Following the scheduling of hearings to gather additional testimony on any changes or revisions in the program, the referendum would be held.

If plans move ahead as tentatively scheduled, the referendum could be held in December.

If approved, the marketing program could be implemented in the early part of 1981.

Any advertising under a proposed program would be limited to generic advertising, according to enabling legislation that permits marketing plans to promote state farm products.

The Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act of 1968 specifically states that any program "shall be directed toward increasing the sale of such commodities without reference to any particular firm's or individual's brand or trade name.

This particular limitation

Going that extra mile for better milk yields.

When your cows need feed, they need feed. They need it right away. And in the right combination. That's why the Pennfield delivery fleet packs so much versatility for its size. Compartmentalized trucks deliver feed from any of our four plants where more than 22,000 tons of grain and other ingredients are kept on hand ... ready for mixing at all times. By going this extra mile to deliver the right feed at the right time we can assure you that the Pennfield Computerized Total Ration Service is helping you to better milk yields. Here's how the service works: 1. We collect samples of your forage. 2. Then we evaluate the quality of your forages. We determine the total digestible nutrients. The fiber content. The protein content. The amount of carbohydrates. 3. The computer quickly spots any nutrients lacking in the forage. For your milking cows And for your dry cows. It immediately points out the overfeeding of nutrients. Underfeeding, too. Both, of course, may be different at different times of the year. And the printout will tell you what you need. And when. 4. Your Penn Pro Professional advises you on the quantity and type of nutrients that should be added, to balance your total feeding program to your cows nutritional requirements.

Midweek prices on Slaughter Steers were 50-75 lower under a rather cautious demand most days. Heifers were 25-50 lower, instances 75 off. Cows closed 1.50-2.50 lower. bulls 1.00-2.00 higher.

Four Day receipts	13,700
A Year Ago	13,100

Supplies were moderately reduced from the previous week, but were rather poorly distributed over the trading period. Demand was fairly good, but most buying interests were on the cautious side in reflection of an unsettled carcass trade early. Late inquiry was also tempered by the approaching non-slaughter Memorial Day weekend. The overall finish of the Steer and Heifer supply was still attractive with a liberal percentage choice, although many consignments were Mixed 3 and 4 yield grade. Slaughter Steers made up approximately 50 pct and Heifers 29 pct. Cows comprised 12 pct and feeders 5 pct.

Lancaster Farming says...

Here's a model farmers will

In too many farm families, estate planning never goes much further than dad saying one day to the children "some day all of this will be yours "

As readers who have followed Sheila Miller's fine series on estate planning know, that isn't necessarily so. By the time the estate gets on down the line of government taxes, the heir is lucky to inherit a plot big enough to turn a tractor around

Actually, there are two ways to approach the major task of estate planning.

If you'd like some guidance from experts on estate planning, check the front of our Section B over the past and coming weeks Our estate planning series deals with all aspects of making sure your estate goes where you want it to, from drawing up a will to forming a family stock corporation

But there's an easier way—and it's all right here on this very page. It's a simple will that's likely to feel right at home to most farmers

For guidance in preparing this model will, we're indebted to the knowledgable folks at Iowa Farm Bureau It goes like this

Being of sound mind and body I do will and bequeath.

To my wife, my overdrafts at the bank Maybe she can explain them

To my son, equity in my car Now he'll have to work to meet the payments

To my banker, my soul He's got the mortgage on it anyway

To my neighbor, my clown suit He'll need it if he continues to farm as he has in the past

To Farmers Home Administration, my unpaid bills They took some real chances on me and I want to do something for them

To ASCS, my grain bin I was planning to let them have it next year, anyhow.

To the farm advisor, 50 bushels of No 2 corn to see if he can hit the high market after years of telling me why I never did

To the Soil Conservation Service people, my farm plan Maybe they can understand it

To the junk dealer, my machinery He's had his eyes on it for years

To my undertaker, a special request I'd like six implement and fertilizer dealers for pallbearers, please—they've all been carrying me for years

To the weatherman, rain, sleet and snow for the funeral. There's no sense in having nice weather now

To the gravedigger, don't bother The hole I've dug for myself over the years should be big enough, thank you

Signed,
A Frustrated Farmer

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ALL THINGS NEW

Lesson for May 25, 1980

Background Scripture:
Revelation 21 through 22
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 65:17-25.

An author friend of mine, a writer with many popular books to his credit, was planning to edit a book about the apocalyptic trend in current religion. He wrote me a letter and asked me to write a chapter about apocalyptic developments in the United Methodist Church I replied, "Well, I'll be glad to research the subject a bit, but I suspect I'm going to find that, denominationally speaking, at least, there aren't any 'apocalyptic developments' about which to write." My research subsequently proved this statement correct.

It has been my observation that, for the most part, on the subject of the apocalypse — the historical Day of the Lord when the final struggle between good and evil takes place — most churches fall into one of two groups· (1) Those that ignore it, and (2) those that ignore virtually everything else. Both groups look at each other in uncomprehending dismay and indignation, wondering how the other group can be so far off the scriptural track.

Wipe Away Every Tear

It is probably another class case of "throwing out the baby with the extremities of many who have espoused the apocalyptic perspective, many Christians have perhaps overreacted by avoiding the subject altogether I understand and can identify with this group, the majority of Christians. As presented by many apocalyptics, the message is one of gore and gloom. These people often seem to revel in the fire and destruction they see coming upon everyone else They remind me of Jonathan Swift's famous rhyme:

"We are God's chosen few,
All others will be damned:
There's no room in here
for you,
We can't have Heaven crammed!"

Yet, when we read the Book of Revelation, we find that, among the dire predictions, there is an even more prominent message of hope and comfort. The writer of Revelation does not glory in woeful predictions, but in wonderful promises of vindicated faith:

"Behold the dwelling of God is with men....He will wipe away every tear from their eyes, and death shall be no more, neither shall there be mourning or crying nor pain anymore, for the former things have passed away ...Behold, I make all things new" (21:3-5).

The writing of John is poetic and prophetic. It is not the language of the historian or the scientist and therefore speaks to inspire rather than to communicate facts. So we do not know when this day will be — whether historical or personal, actual or symbolic. All we need to know is the bottom line: "Behold, I make all things new!"

TO INSPECT AUTOMATIC FEEDERS

Feed costs are one of the big items in the production costs of all farm animals. During these times when costs seem to be greater than the returns, every effort to reduce feed costs, means more dollars in the bank Many hogs and steers are fed from self-feeders This is a good method of feeding livestock with minimum labor requirements; however, in too many cases the feeders are a place where too much feed is wasted. Some need adjusted and others need repaired. Producers are urged to inspect their feeders to be sure the animals are not wasting feed. This can mean the difference between profit and loss.

TO SPRAY FOR JOHNSON GRASS

No doubt weather conditions have prevented some corn growers from getting their corn planted. For those who have a Johnson Grass infestation, now would be the time to apply the Eradicane weed killer to the area infested. Several discings ahead of the application and one or two following the treatment should mix up the Johnson Grass roots with the weed killer and stop growth. Late May to early June is the best time for this treatment in this part of the state. I have mentioned this treatment previously in this column; however, I feel that land with this problem needs attention in order to keep the Johnson Grass from taking over the farm. Don't let this aggressive weed take over your farm.

TO BEWARE OF CORN INSECTS

With a growing trend toward no-till corn planting, or minimum tillage, we can expect more problems with corn insects. This has been the experiences in the past. Corn growers are urged to inspect their fields frequently to observe any feeding on the small plants. We can have cutworms, stalk borers, and armyworms at any time feeding on the corn plants. The cutworms and armyworms may be controlled with sprays of Sevin. Dylox, or Diazinon. The stalk borers are very difficult to control Flea Beetles are another insect that may feed upon the small corn leaves; they cause small holes in the leaves but seldom do extensive damage; the insecticide, Sevin, can be used to eliminate these small insects, if it is a serious infestation. Keep an eye on the corn field for the first several weeks and avoid serious insect injury.

TO PROTECT ALFALFA

Due to the favorable weather conditions for vegetative growth, a rank growth of alfalfa and clover is on the ground. With a few days of hot weather we will have many fields in the bud to early-blossom stage. We are not aware of many serious infestations of alfalfa weevil; however, if they are present when the crop is cut, it is suggested to spray the stubble in order to prevent the weevil from eating the new growth. This has saved many second cuttings in the past years. Also, spraying of the second and third cuttings for leaf hoppers is strongly suggested; this is one of the most serious insects of local alfalfa; this spray application can be applied when new growth is from 3 to 6 inches high; don't wait until yellow, stunted plants are observed, and then spray. Try to prevent the stunting of the plants by the leaf hoppers.

While some companies look for ways to build bins cheaper, we find ways to build bins better. Bins that will last longer, look nicer and protect grain better.

That's why we use only prime high-tensile steel. And precision form and punch each piece.

Delta sets farm day

DELTA — The farm community surrounding Delta will hold an "Old Fashion Country Day and Farm Tour Hayride" Saturday, June 21, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., in conjunction with the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the incorporation of Delta in 1880.

"The purpose of the farm festival is to promote better understanding between the farmer and his urban neighbors," according to Kay Taylor, co-chairperson and a farm wife who lives near Airville. "The tours of the farm and exhibits will make it a fun day for all participants," she said.

The general public is invited to take part in the scheduled events at no charge, according to Mrs. Taylor, who is representing the York County Farmers' Association. Margie Fifer is the other co-chairperson and is representing the Delta Centennial Committee.

Hayrides will be available to the general public to tour six Delta area farms. Other events include displays, special music, square dance exhibitions, a petting zoo and games for children, craft displays, movies and other activities. There will be country-baked goods available to purchase along with other food and refreshments.

"We have some 100 persons now involved in the planning including farmers, FFA and 4-H along with organizations in Delta" Mrs. Taylor said. "It's truly a community-wide effort."

Participants wishing to take the hayride tours of Delta area farms can catch shuttle buses at the Delta Community Center, off State Route 851. There will be signs posted to give direction.

Here are the farms the general public will be touring:

David and Barbara Stewart, dairy farm; Cooper and Marley Boyd, orchard; John Rush and Barbara Baldwin, III, beef and hog; Dave and Mary Catherine Thompson, dairy farm and milk jugger; Mel and Marge Fifer, strawberries and vegetables (pick your own), and Joseph and Lois Ailes and son, Eddie, hog farm.

THINK TWICE

Many growers resist the idea of double cropping because of the pressure of time. It's time to think twice. With ORTHO PARAQUAT CL plus a residual herbicide you can actually harvest one crop and plant a second the same day. PARAQUAT is a fast-acting herbicide that kills a broad spectrum of unwanted weeds and grasses. You can plant land treated with PARAQUAT immediately. You plant right into the stubble of the preceeding crop with no fuel consuming plowing or discing.

The savings on fuel are sizeable. You also save on time, labor, and equipment usage costs. For best results, apply PARAQUAT with ORTHO X-77® Spreader.

DANGER: PARAQUAT is highly toxic if swallowed and should be kept out of the reach of children. To prevent accidental ingestion, never transfer to food, drink, or other containers. Read the label carefully and follow all directions, danger statements, and worker safety rules. Restricted Use Pesticide. Use all chemicals only as directed.

Delaware announces Junior Broiler contest winners

DOVER, Del. — Paul Enterline of Dover is the champion in this year's Delaware Junior Broiler Contest. Scoring an impressive 95.75 out of a possible 100 points against a total of 103 entries, Enterline won both a trophy and $50 in prize money.

Second-place winner in the event was Ben Carrow of Clayton with 94.5 points. He received $40 for his outstanding performance.

Wayne Carlisle of Woodside duplicated his 1979 record, placing third with 93.0 points.

Scores were based on a number of factors, including confirmation, condition, appearance and uniformity of entry, weight, and record-keeping. Each contestant started with 50 wing-banded chicks The best seven of each flock were judged at the end of the growout period.

For the first time in the history of the contest the growing period was shortened to 47 days — two less than last year. This was done because of the improved growth rate of newer strains of broiler chickens. In 1977 the growing time was 52 days. When the contest began 32 years ago, it took about 10 weeks for the birds to reach processing size.

Ann Moore of Wyoming raised the heaviest entry this year Her seven birds totaled 38.5 pounds for an average weight of 5 5 pounds. She also produced the heaviest bird last year Overall average weight of competing broilers was 4.59 pounds, live weight.

Cash prizes were also awarded to the following contestants in order of placement· Valerie Mast, Hartly, Sondra Warren, Frederica; Lynn Bullen, Middletown; Jeff Armour, Harrington; Ronald Kellein, Newark; Keith Warrington, Bridgeville; Wendy French, Smyrna; Allen Cook, Kenton; and Jenny Smith, Bridgeville. Ron Walton, Magnolia, Adam Carrow, Clayton; Dale Cook, Kenton, Steve Majchrzak, Seaford, Chris Majchrzak, Jeff Jones, Selbyville, Roland Daniels, Townsend, and Rachel Carrow, Clayton.

Each contestant was given 50 chicks in March and was responsible for feeding and caring for them through maturity. Seven birds from each flock were then selected for competition, dressed by a commercial processor, displayed, and judged.

July to be first National Peach Month

MARTINSBURG, WV — July 1980 will be the first National Peach Month.

A formal resolution to that effect was passed by the National Peach Council Executive Committee Monday, May 12 during the committee's Spring meeting in Hagerstown, MD.

Though peaches are harvested from April until October in the United States, peak supplies occur nationally in July and the committee decided there would be no better month for the special designation.

Letters have already been sent by National Peach Council President Douglas Zee to President Jimmy Carter and the Governors of all peach producing states asking them to issue similar proclamations.

Several other actions which are expected to help the industry and National Peach Council were taken during the one day meeting.

Zee announced the appointment of a Grade and Standards Committee which will work with the United States Department of Agriculture on changes in the present grades and standards for peaches.

Changes are needed, the committee agreed, because there have been so many changes in peach varieties since the present grades were established.

Arlie A. Powell, Extension Horticulturist at Auburn University, Auburn, AL, will be chairman of the committee, with Anthony J. "Tony" Rubino of Hagerstown, MD, who is president of Blue Goose Growers, Inc., as vice chairman.

Other members of the committee will be Albert Petersen of Clovis, CA; Ed Gregory of Quitman, GA; Robert F. McCurrie of Holly Hill, SC; and all members of the National Peach Council Executive Committee.

These are: Zee, of Glassboro, NJ, president; Robert G. Kemp, of Princess Anne, MD, first vice president; Ernest F. Fischer of Porter, OK, second vice president; Henry Chiles of Batesville, VA, third vice president; Dale R. Ferguson of Palisade, CO, immediate past president; and Mrs. Maxine Clark of Palisade, CO, president of National Peach Partners.

Promotion of peaches and of NPC within the peach industry were both given special attention by the Executive Committee.

Among those attending the Executive Committee meeting were Allen Brock, chairman of the board of United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association; Bernard F. Imming, president of UFFVA; and John Nelson, vice president for membership for the same organization.

After learning about the peach promotion work which UFFVA is doing as part of the Fresh Approach, the Executive Committee decided to have UFFVA send a special folder about peaches to a large number of supermarkets.

The folder is made up as camera-ready copy so the individual chains or cooperative groups can have the material reprinted and placed as free material near displays in produce departments.

A motion also was approved to have work done on updating of the NPC slide series, "The Peach Story", which is circulated to a large number of schools each year on requests from teachers. The series was prepared by Rutgers University for NPC in 1972. It is widely publicized, and has been shown hundreds of times since it first became available.

Purchase of a banner for use in major National Peach Council meetings was also given tentative approval by the committee.

The banner will be used as a backdrop to the speaker's platform at annual conventions, or at other locations where it will publicize the fact that National Peach Council is meeting at a facility.

Plans to have National Peach Council's concerns about control of harmful nematodes presented at a meeting of the Society of Nematologists were also discussed.

NPC has been invited to have someone give a 20-minute presentation on the peach industry's concerns about nematodes at a symposium during the society's annual meeting, and the Executive Committee agreed that someone should be asked to present the peach industry's views on the matter.

Plans for the beginning of a new membership campaign which would try to get more special memberships from among peach producers and other persons were presented by Lois Ann Barbour, NPC membership coordinator.

All her proposals were accepted and she was given authorization to proceed.

Plans for upcoming conventions of the council were reviewed by the three vice president and NPC Convention Coordinator Lillie E. Hoover.

Special emphasis was given to the 1981 convention which will be held February 16-19 at Del Webb's Townehouse in Phoenix, AZ. NPC First Vice President Robert G. Kemp has primary responsibility for that convention.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

We read with interest and amusement Pat Kauffman's article on this year's Dairy Princess Pageant and the exclusion of goat owners.

The more I read the more Mr. Robert Morris, director of Special Programs for the Pa. Holstein Assn., displayed his lack of knowledge of genus capra. While he may be knowledgeable about Holsteins, and is undoubtedly an expert in Special Programs, he doesn't know much about dairy, goats, or dairy goats.

He states that "there's a lot of difference between a goat and a cow, and there's a lot of difference in the way they are raised and milked." As one who has milked both (currently 50 goats), I challenge Mr. Morris to tell us what these vast differences are. Aside from being smaller and cleaner, dairy goats are raised, fed and milked in a remarkedly similar manner to cows.

Perhaps Mr. Morris' next move will be to disqualify Jersey owners from the Pageant on the basis that their product tastes better than Holstein milk.

Remember, Mr. Morris, if God had meant for us to milk cows, he would have given us four hands.

Dear Editor:

This letter brings you a copy of one of your issues of Lancaster Farming.

One article from your publication uses a Dow registered trademark, Styrofoam, as if it were a noun—the name of some type of material.

That's an incorrect use of the Dow trademark, which is the brand name under which Dow markets Styrofoam brand plastic foams. Your usage treats the trademark as if it were a generic term.

We'd appreciate your help in correctly handling the Styrofoam trademark, should it turn up in future copy

Thanks.

A little extra effort and attention devoted now to harvesting top quality hay and haylage will return big dividends for the following year.

Cows need top quality forages for top production! You spend only a few days a year harvesting your hay crop, but your cows continue to harvest your hay crop every day of the year when they convert it into milk. Remember, as a dairyman, you are in the business of harvesting hay as milk. Cows cannot be expected to produce more milk than the quality of the hay crop permits.

The time to harvest first-cuttings is upon us! So, now is the time to focus your efforts upon putting up the best quality forage possible. To accomplish this, it is necessary to recognize which jobs are most important, and then performing those operations on time — easier said than done.

For top quality, alfalfa should be harvested in the bud stage of maturity and grasses in the boot stage. As maturity progresses beyond this point, feed value starts declining rapidly.

Unfortunately, we seldom have desirable weather for curing forages at the time when first cuttings should be harvested. This means we usually have to take every opportunity of breaks in the weather when they occur. These weather breaks are free; we can't buy them and we can't schedule them.

We need better weather conditions for curing a hay crop than we do for planting corn, working ground, etc So when the weather is suitable for making hay, it will probably be more profitable to make hay than to plant corn.

Remember, the quality of your hay will affect your cows milk production (your profits) every day of the year

Delaying corn planting may reduce corn yields slightly, but chances are it won't affect the quality of the silage harvested. Furthermore, what you may lose in corn yields you'll probably make up in additional hay yields, because the early harvest will probably result in an extra cutting of hay

Haylage has enabled many farmers to harvest their first cutting on time in spite of less-than-desirable weather conditions However, haylage does not fit into every farm situation because of the high cost of equipment, machinery and storage units, the losses resulting from damaged hay crops may be less expensive

One word of caution when harvesting alfalfa, it may be necessary to compromise between top feed quality and life of the stand Continually harvesting alfalfa in the bud stage of maturity may weaken the stand and shorten its longevity. Thus the first cutting of a new seeding, or any cuttings from weakened stands, should be made in the bloom stage of maturity.

To maintain their vigor, stands that are frequently cut in the bud stage must be free from insects, weeds and diseases, and they must be well fertilized.

Moisture at time of harvest is also very important for hay and for haylage, and the only accurate way of determining this is by using a good moisture tester. They will be inconvenient to use during the busy harvesting operations, but they are a very valuable tool to help guide harvesting decisions necessary for top quality forages.

For less field losses, for less heat damage to protein, for improved energy use, and for less secondary fermentation and spoilage, haylage should be ensiled at about 55 to 65 percent moisture (35 to 45 percent dry matter), and hay should be baled at about 20 to 22 percent moisture.

Moisture is constantly changing in the windrow. Thus, one will have to start early, at the higher moisture level, and work fast. When the moisture falls to the lower level, it may be necessary to quit temporarily, waiting for the hay to pick up more moisture. Or, large quantities of water can be added at the silo

How much water is needed? To raise the moisture content of one ton of 45 percent moist haylage to 55 percent moisture will require about 56 gallons of water.

To prevent excessive leaf shatter and loss of feed nutrients, hay should be baled at about 20 to 22 percent moisture. At this level, the bales should be loose so they can dry down, and to prevent heating and spoilage. Above this level of moisture, preservatives can be relied upon to preserve feed quality, to help prevent spoilage and spontaneous combustion

Raking should also be done when the hay is damp enough to prevent leaf shatter

When ensiling a hay crop, length of cut is also important A 3/8 inch theoretical cut is recommended for good packing and for preserving, what I term, the 'forage factor" of the forage This is necessary for maintaining good rumen activity and good fat test To achieve a uniform cut, sharp knives are necessary Rapid filling also prevents spoilage and promotes better quality

Now that you have gone to all the expense and effort of growing the crop, harvesting it, and preserving it for top quality, let s make sure your cows will make the most efficient use of the feed nutrients you have "put up" in storage.

Test those forage crops for nutrient content at or shortly after harvest time, while you can get to them. Then, you will be able to balance your feed rations and have a feeding plan in your hand ready to use when you need it. That enables you to get maximum mileage (milk) out of your forage, and out of your cows.

Haylage, put up at 60 to 65 percent moisture, can be sampled at filling time. Grab samples from several loads throughout filling time. Immediately put them in a moisture-proof bag and stick them in a refrigerator or freezer. When filling is completed thaw the bags, mix them together, and submit a sample for analysis.

Once you have been feeding the haylage for a while, additional samples from the silo can be submitted periodically for further refinement of the feeding program.

Hay can also be sampled at baling time. Randomly select bales from the wagon and throw them aside for sampling at a later time after they have dried down. A hay sampling auger should be used to collect the sample.

Identify the batch of hay and note where it is stored in the mow. Sample alfalfa or alfalfa mixtures separately from grass or grass mixtures. Similiarly, sample first cutting separately from aftermath (second, third and fourth) cuttings.

Farm and Home Foundation awards scholarships

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — Twenty young Lancaster countians were awarded scholarships of $750 each by the Lancaster County Farm and Home Foundation at the regular meeting of their Board of Directors on Tuesday.

Scholarships were awarded on the basis of financial need, scholarship and leadership and are for the freshman year of college. Six agricultural scholarships were given, four home economists and ten nursing.

Money for the scholarships, the largest number and the highest amount given since the program's inception, comes from a trust fund set up by late Elmer L. Esbenshade, one of the Foundation's early beneficiaries and from the Foundation's treasury.

Those who received home economics scholarships include:

Lisa A. Bischoff, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan A. Bischoff, 72 North Maple Street, Ephrata. Graduating from Ephrata High School, Lisa will attend Indiana University of Pennsylvania, where she will major in food and nutrition with possible hopes of becoming a dietician. She said her career plans come from her mother's good cooking. Lisa is a member of Junior Historians, the choir and bell choir and the sacred dance group at the Church of the Apostles, Lancaster.

Susan Misselhorn, 18, 1061 Sherry Lane, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. Misselhorn. A student at Hempfield High School, she will be attending Mansfield State College and will major in clothing and textiles. She said, "I really like to sew and I wanted to do something that is related. I hope to sew for a designer or be a buyer in a store." Susan is a member of the concert and marching bands, participates in track and is a member of her class steering committee.

Susan Jean Howell, 18, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund O. Howell, New Holland R3. A senior at Garden Spot High School, she will attend the University of Delaware and study interior design and fashion design. A member of the Garden Spot 4-H Club for nine years, Susan said her 4-H experiences influenced her career decision. She is a member of the National Honor Society, the chorus,

Carriage goes for $12 grand

INTERCOURSE — If you noticed a few more cars with out-of-state license plates winding down the Lancaster County roads near Intercourse last Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, these folks probably weren't just the usual Dutch country tourists.

Over 600 buyers registered at the 9th annual Carriage, Sleigh, and Antique Auction held by Martin Auctioneers, Inc. They came from about 40 states and Canada.

The tents at the sales pavillion were crowded with people and horse drawn vehicles.

Strolling around the grounds, some of the carriage specimens took a bit of imagination to visualize them actually rolling down the road, either in the past or future. But to an expert's eye, these weather beaten, seen-there-better-days carriages offered a challenge in restoration.

Others were shined and polished to a piano-top finish so that a passer-by could see his own reflection. And even the novice carriage enthusiast could appreciate the time and effort put into reshaping the antique mode of transport.

Around 250 vehicles were sold on Saturday, bringing to a grand finale the two previous days' sales of antiques and horse related items.

According to Martins, the Friday evening sale of horse equipment went on into Saturday's early morning hours.

"The people stuck with us, so we sold until 1:45 in the morning. If we hadn't sold so late on Friday, the Saturday sale would have lasted until midnight instead of finishing up at 8 p.m."

The top price paid for a carriage this year was $12,700. Douglas Cater, of Gallupville, New York, became the proud new owner of a 6-passenger mud wagon made by Abbott & Downing.

The extra light vehicle that looks like a stage coach to the untrained eye did not top the sale record for price paid for a single carriage. Martins said that several years ago, a stage coach sold for $25,000.

One of the top-priced vehicles will be rolling out to the windy state of Kansas. An immaculate carriage, known as a panel boot victoria, sold for $7700 to a Kansas carriage enthusiast.

Thomas Gerrity, from Moscow, Lackawanna County, bought a hearse manufactured by Cunningham Carriage Co., Cleveland, Ohio about 1887. The hearse came complete with a plain wood coffin, and sold for $3000.

The carriage lamps that were on the hearse were sold separately, bringing $800 for the pair.

Following the hearse in the sale, a carriage called a rockaway because of its unique suspension for a smoother ride sold for $4100.

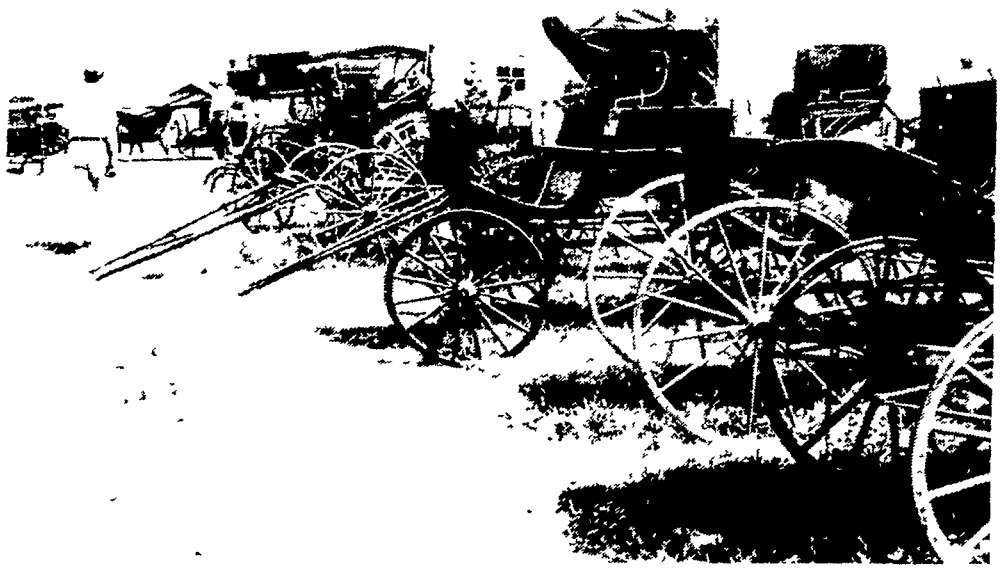
What was special about this rockaway? It was made by the Cunningham Carriage Co., Cleveland, Ohio, and was in original condition, with a front seat that was reversible.

Another unique vehicle that rolled across the auction block was a vis-a-vis wagonette. This four wheeled carriage was imported from England and was totally restored.

It was equipped with three seats, two facing front and with the one behind the driver's seat facing to the rear. That's why it's called a vis-a-vis, because that's French for face-to-face.

The Martins' carriage auction, famous throughout the world, is over for this May. For anyone interested in seeing probably the largest collection of horse drawn vehicles gathered under tents in one sales pavilion (at least in Lancaster County, if not the world), they should plan to wander on down to Intercourse in August when the next carriage auction will bring back memories of yesteryear.

With the carriage lamps of a top-selling hearse in the foreground, sleighs and carts in all sizes and states of repair filled the tents and grounds around the sales pavilion.



Rows and rows of carriages rolled across the auction block at Martin's Ninth Annual Carriage, Sleigh, and Antique sale.

Legislative roundup

Capitol Hill prepares for rush of activity

BY CURT HARLER

HARRISBURG — The stage is set for number of bills to move here on Capitol Hill once the Commonwealth Budget is passed.

Despite the slowdown, several farm-related bills continued to churn through the halls of Harrisburg.

SB 10, which among other things would raise the gross truck weight limit to 80,000 pounds passed a Senate-House conference committee.

SB 985 and SB 986, commonly known as the Knapp bills, were reported out of committee. They were rewritten to include a 12 year buyback period.

The bills, if passed, would keep municipalities from taking land by eminent domain and then speculating with it. The Knapp's case was the one where farmland was condemned 11 years ago and the school district now is trying to sell the property for a shopping center.

Hearings were held by the Senate Labor and Industry Committee on J. Doyle Corman's package of workmans' compensation reform measures, SB 712-719 inclusive.

In general, farm groups called for speedy passage of those measures

The House calendar for next week features hearings by the House Ag Committee on several important measures including HB 2360, the noxious weed bill; HB 995, which ammends the dog law; and HB 2339, the Christmas tree grower legislation.

The Milk Security Fund legislation will sit until June; the budget comes first.

But if just two bills had to be singled out they would be SB 10 and Corman's package.

"We are quite concerned that we do get SB 10 through," says Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Director of Governmental Relations Al Myers.

Milk haulers and others have screamed for higher weight limits which SB 10 would provide. But the bill also has some other surprises.

Existing classes of trucks over 5000 pounds would pay $2 to $226 more in fees. The 80,000 pound rigs would pay roughly $1125 annually.

The bill will raise the out-of-state marker fee from $2 to $25. There will be a title transfer fee increase from $5 to $15. Inspection stickers for all vehicles, cars and trucks, will jump from the present 25 cents to one dollar.

Temproary licenses would cost $5 instead of the current $1. Persons with licenses suspended would have to pay $25, above any fine, to have their license reinstated.

The bill should raise about $95.1 million in extra revenue.

Of that amount, about $5.1 million will go to local municipalities.

Now that the conference committee has approved it, the bill could go to a vote as early as this coming Tuesday. But insiders are not optimistic that the measure will move before the budget impasse is broken.

Workmens' Compenstion, in the words of State Grange Master Charles Wismer, "is a system gone wild."

He asked the hearings what kind of program made dairying twice as dangerous as professional football or hockey.

Indeed, the pro players contribute $5.99 per $100 of payroll to WC funds while dairymen must pay $10,87.

Wismer came down hard on the insurance companies which write WC policies.

Chamber of Commerce figures show that in 1978 employers paid $789.6 million for WC coverage. But that same year, only $390 million was paid out.

That means the insurance companies took more than half of the premiums in operating expenses or profits.

The Grange asked that the legislature reduce WC rates, allow for employers and municipalities to self-insure, and to tighten up the filing process to cut down on payouts to undeserving people.

Groups like PFA, too, want the package to move fast PFA especially likes the provision which will allow groups with a minimum of $500,000 in premiums to self-insure. PFA falls within that group.

HB 2489 would allow such groups, and local governments, to run their own WC programs. While not a part of the Corman Senate package, the House Bill proposes similar ideas.

At the same time, the House Finance Committee's Energy Subcommittee heard testimony on the possibility of tax incentives for energy saving devices.

David Weinstock, public relations director of the Grange, pointed out that Pennsylvania is one of only 10 states not offering solar tax credits

"Unless the state demonstrates its commitment to aiding the consumer with tax incentives, Pennsylvania's energy future looks bleak," he said.

The 20 lots offered for sale averaged $565, with 23 females averaging $537 and 6 bulls averaging $675.

Franklin breeders talk cow classification

BY RUTH ANN BENEDICT
Staff Correspondent

KAUFFMAN STATION — Nearly 100 Franklin County Holstein breeders and local FFA members turned out for the Franklin County Holstein Barn Meeting here last Monday, at the home of the Harold F. Crider family, Antrim Spring Farm.

Ronald Entlicher, official herd classifier from Missouri, who is currently classifying herds in Franklin County, was present for the event and acted as the official judge for the judging contest.

He also commented on the classifying he has been doing here in Franklin County.

"You have some fine cows to be proud of in this county and we appreciate the good cooperation you have given us as that makes our hard job somewhat easier" stated Entlicher.

The National Holstein Headquarters where Entlicher works out of is located in Brattleboro, Vermont.

Winners in the senior division of the dairy judging contest are: first - Ivan Wenger; second - Dwayne Brechbill; third - James Junior division winners are: first - Ginger Small; second - Gerald Martin; third - Rodney Meyers; fourth - Nancy Brake; fifth - Debbie Cashell; sixth - Cindy Donough; and seventh - Jeff Benedict.

Classes of 4 year olds, 3 year olds and 2 year olds were judged by those attending.

Harold F. Crider, owner of Antrim Spring Farm, introduced his family members and commented on their 41 cow dairy operation.

Crider stated that he started classifying in 1963 and that year he only had one cow make a very good rating.

"Now after just classifying we have one excellent and 13 very good cows.

The excellent aged cow, Antrim Spring Dandy Barb, produced 19,033 pounds of milk, 649 pounds of fat with a 3.4 test during her last lactation. Her sire is Dandy Astronaut.

Antrim Spring Farm also had four Elevation daughters recently classified with three of those going very good.

"Over the years we have bred seven excellent cows with the first being in 1966" said Crider.

Franklin County Holstein Club officers are: Stanley Burkholder - president; Fred F. Rice - vice-president; Norman Sollenberger - secretary/treasurer; and Harold F. Crider - state director.

Prizes for the judging contest winners were sponsored by area farm related businesses.

Refreshments were provided by Gettel Farm Dairy of Shippensburg.

Farmers get 3 nice days to push fieldwork

HARRISBURG — With wet fields during the week ending May 19, Commonwealth farmers took full advantage of the three days suitable for fieldwork, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. Southern counties reported an extra day suitable for work, while central counties had one less suitable day.

Field activities included plowing, spraying and planting of oats, corn, potatoes, soybeans, alfalfa, clover, vegetables and silage crops.

Statewide, reports of farm fuel supplies were mostly adequate. LP gas was rated as 94 percent adequate and four percent surplus, while diesel fuel was rated at 95 percent adequate and four percent surplus. Gasoline supplies were rated at 93 percent adequate and five percent surplus.

Statewide soil moisture was rated surplus to adequate. Soils were rated three-fourths surplus and one-fourth adequate in moisture for the central area; one-half surplus and one-half adequate for the north; and one-third surplus and two-thirds adequate in the southern section of the commonwealth.

Plowing is now 83 percent complete compared to 91 percent complete last year at this time. Spring plowing was reported 83 percent done in the north, 86 percent done in the central region; and 80 percent complete in the south.

Soybean planting is ahead of last year, with 19 percent complete compared with 14 percent in 1979. Northern counties reported the most progress in planting, at 37 percent complete. Southern and central counties reported seven and eight percent complete, respectively.

Oats are 90 percent sown, compared with 94 percent a year ago. In the north, 83 percent has been sown, while central counties report 94 percent sown. Ninety-six percent of the oats are sown in the southern counties.

Potato planting was still lagging at 62 percent complete, compared to last year's 75 percent planted. Northern counties reported potato planting as 39 percent complete. Central counties have 74 percent planted and the southern section of the commonwealth, making good progress, reports 82 percent.

Corn planting is also behind at 45 percent complete, compared to last year's 63 percent and the historic average of 51 percent planted. Progress of corn planting for the north was at 41 percent, with 48 percent planted in the central counties and 47 percent planted in the southern area of Pennsylvania

Barley progressed to 45 percent in boot and 18 percent headed compared to 31 percent in boot and 42 percent headed last year Wheat is at 33 percent boot stage and six percent headed. This compares to 49 percent in boot and 14 percent headed in 1979.

Alfalfa hay stands were reported in two-thirds good and one-third fair condition The first alfalfa cutting was reported at less than five percent with similar portions going to hay and silage. Clo-tim stands were also rated at two-thirds good and one-third fair condition. Amounts of feed obtained from pasture were rated average.

Practically all peaches and cherries were reported in or past full bloom, the same as last year. Apples were 14 percent pink and 83 percent in or past full bloom, compared to 86 percent in 1979

Asparagus cutting has begun and strawberries are beginning to bloom Planting of sweet corn and other vegetable crops is progressing

Chris Shive reported on the Saturday May 31 preview show to be held at the York Fairgrounds. This is a good opportunity to come out and see what beef cattle are all about. The show will start at 10 a.m.

Tony Dobrosky gave a slide presentation on the BMY beef promotion. Part of the money earned from the beef promotion will go toward a new carpet in the small meeting room at the center. In addition to the BMY slides, a Simmental movie was also shown.

Next meeting will be Monday, June 2 at 7 p.m. A fitting and showmanship demonstration will be given at the 4-H center. Reported by Christine Shive.

USDA extends comment on end of bee indemnity

WASHINGTON, DC. — The comment period on a proposal to terminate the U.S. Department of Agriculture's beekeeper indemnity payment program, originally scheduled to end April 29 has been extended until June 12, according to Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of USDA'S Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Under the Proposal, beekeepers whose bees are killed by insecticides approved for use by the government would no longer be eligible for federal indemnity payments. The program originally was scheduled to be terminated May 15.

Fitzgerald said the comment period was being extended to allow interested parties more time to familarize themselves with the information, determine the impact and prepare their responses.

All comments on the proposal should be sent to Bob Cook, ASCS-EIPD, USDA, Box 2415, Washington, D.C., 20013.

Northampton youth, calves move into spotlight

EASTON — Calves were in the spotlight last week when Northampton County youngsters participated in the annual calf fitting and showing competition sponsored by the County Holstein Club.

The calves were selected in the morning and given to a pair of youngsters, one experienced and the other inexperienced. After watching fitting and showing demonstrations, the youngsters were on their own to clip, wash and halter break their calves.

In the afternoon, Don Fowler, Fulton County extension agent, judged the group in junior and senior showing and fitting. County agri-businesses donated supplies and prizes. Upstream Farm Corp. hosted the event.

Junior winners were eight-year-old Kevin McEwen and nine-year-old Cara Strohmeier. Senior winners were Tammy Minnich, 15, and Randy Ott, 13. Fitting was won by Mark Sandt, Bill Mack and Shelly Minnich

The big moment comes when the judge selects the winners in the Northampton County calf fitting and showing competition. Anticipation shows on the faces of the youngsters as he moved toward the winner.

These youngsters, although a bit young and a few years shy of competing, thoroughly enjoy the activities in calf fitting and showing.

While a pair of strong hands firmly holds the calf, another pair gingerly operates clippers to give bovine facial in fitting and showing competition.

There's more than one way to attempt to move a balky calf. It helps to get a friend, with one pulling and the other pushing.

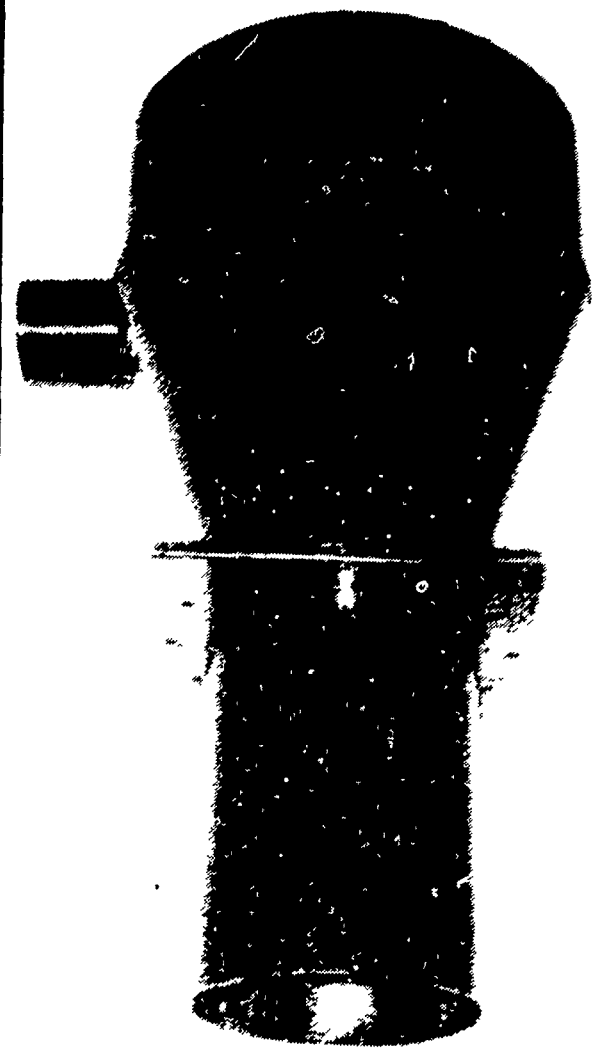
Having Problems With Bridging And Feed Separation In Your Bulk Bin?



AGRI-EQUIPMENT INC. HAS THE ANSWER

SPECIAL DESIGNED FEED COLLECTOR

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

Instead of feed being blown in at high velocity at an angle causing the fines to drop on one side of the bin and the coarse particles on the other side, Agri-Equipments' Feed Collector allows feed to decelerate and drop gently into the center of the bin leaving you with a balanced ration as shown in the diagram below.

AGRI EQUIPMENT INC. also recommends that a Choretime Posi-Flow be coupled with its Feed Collector so that its slowly revolving disk and wisker will insure that the first feed in is first out. Result; no build up of moldy or stale feed, no bridging, no Medication Residue.

High voltage lines, love'em or leave'em

LITITZ — No matter where you travel across the United States, sometime or another you are bound to find yourself driving under or flying over those tall gray, or environmental green, towers of steel that support our nation's power lines.

There is a controversy going on about the effects these electrical fields have on people, animals, and crops. Some research groups say they're harmless, about like falling in love, and others say they are extremely hazardous.

According to Penn State animal behaviorist and researcher H.B. Graves, four years of studying the biological effects of animals exposed to the electric fields under high-voltage transmission lines is about the same as watching a football game, waking up to a ringing alarm clock, or falling in love. In other words, the impact on health is virtually nothing.

In experiments using rats, mice, pigeons, and chicks, Graves and his students created electrical fields stronger than those under the highest-voltage transmission lines.

"Changes in physiology and behavior are mostly transitory and minimal, if there are any changes. Heart rates and blood pressures may rise at the beginning of the experiment and then gradually decline toward normal levels even if the electrical field remains on. When the field is switched off, these health indicators return to normal."

Another Penn State professor, Guy W. McKee, said the electrical field impact on vegetation is also negligible. The agronomist said he had to use fields several times the strength of those under power lines before he found damage, and that was mostly to needles and sharp-pointed leaves. He pointed out that "electrostatic fields concentrate their strength at high points and tips of objects."

"No economically significant damage to crops grown under transmission lines is expected," he stated, citing cases where Indiana farmers routinely grow crops under 765-kilovolt lines (the highest voltage lines in the U.S.).

The controversy of health effects created by powerlines has been going on since 1972 when Russian powerline workers complained of headaches, nausea, and loss of sex drive. Graves pointed out that people are routinely subjected to similar but weaker fields from electric blankets, toasters, and hair dryers.

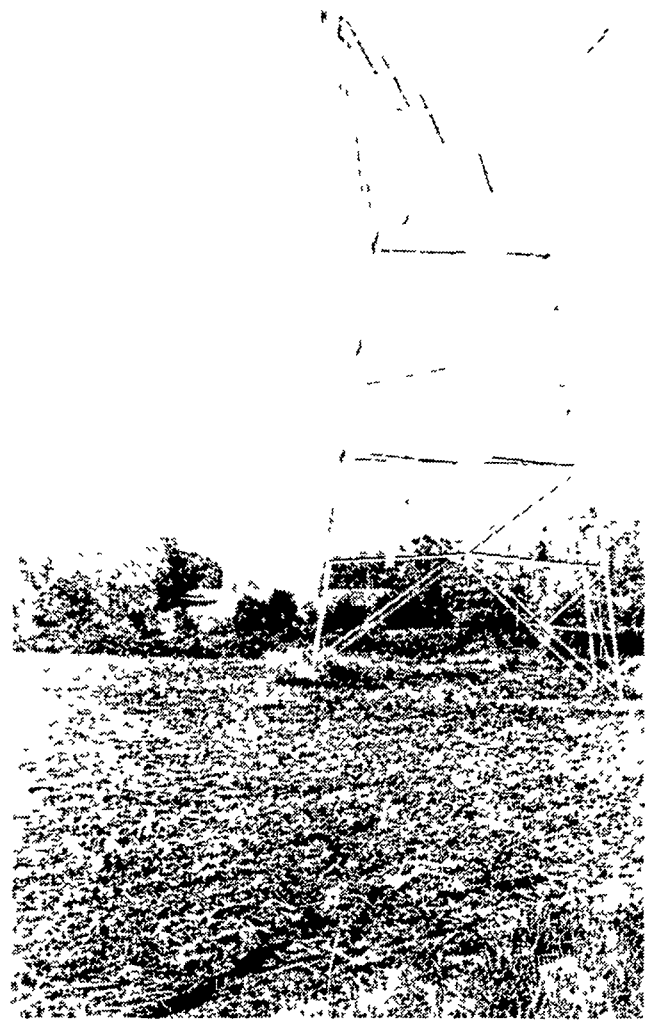
The Electric Power Research Institute funded Westinghouse Corporation, which is turn hired Graves and McKee to perform the studies.

In experiments that used different kilovolts per meter electrical fields, Graves said "birds and animals most likely 'feel' the field in vibration, mini-shocks, or in stimulation of their hair and feathers," similar to the hair standing up on a person's arms when standing in an electrical field.

In contrast to the Penn State report, science writer Lowell Ponte writes in the January issue of Readers Digest of an episode in upstate New York where people carried "eerily glowing glass tubes" under an ultrahigh-voltage power line.

"We're scared," said one of the people. "There's enough electricity in the air 200 feet from those wires to light these flourescent bulbs."

"At issue is electromagnetic pollution — 'electric smog' — the unseen energy waves that spread outward like ripples in a pond around every electrical device we use," said Ponte. "The United States is wired with half a million miles of high voltage power lines." He explained that the typical American today gets 200 million times more intense electromagnetic radiation from television and radio broadcasting, CB radios, and microwave ovens, than what his ancestors took in from the sun, stars, and other natural sources.



High voltage lines, like this one near Brickerville, are the subject of scientific controversy concerning animals, crops, and people.

"It feels like a spider crawling on you," says Marilyn Gruber, describing to Ponte the sensation of being underneath a 765 kilovolt line that utility companies began operating across her Minnesota farm in 1978. "You can hear it, you can feel it," says her husband Werner, "but you can't see it."

Ponte described standing 50 feet below the 765 kilovolt wires and said, "You become coupled with a 10,000-volt-per-meter electromagnetic force field. You can hear the crackle of air being cooked into ozone, a molecule found in smog.

"Energy within the field can burn leaf tips of plants under the line. It can send a painful spark jumping between your hand and a nearby tractor. Hairs on your scalp and arms twitch from the electrical forces at work."

Ponte cited research he said indicated the exposure to levels of electric radiation once considered safe had disquieting results.

"Andrew Marino, a biophysicist at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Syracuse, N.Y., has studied people and animals exposed in laboratory experiments to electric smog simulating that around high voltage power lines. 'Exposure levels like those under the wire can cause a stunting of growth," Marino reported. 'Levels like those 300 to 500 feet away cause physiological effects such as changes in blood chemistry and heart rate. At 100 feet there are behavioral effects such as drops in human reaction time.'"

Ponte also cited research done by W. Ross Adey in 1973, at the Brain Research Institute at UCLA. Adey exposed laboratory monkeys to electric radiation of frequencies present around human beings every day. The results of the experiments — the monkeys' behavior changed and their sense of time was distorted.

According to Ponte, Adey believes that electric smog alters natural biological rhythms, the internal clocks that regulate waking and sleeping and thousands of more subtle body processes. This may put stress on the body with a resulting general resistance breakdown, Ponte reported.

"A person may fall victim to diseases he otherwise would have fought off. This may explain why, according to University of Colorado medical researchers, the death rate for certain cancers such as leukemia is twice the average in homes within 130 feet of high-voltage power lines."

Ponte also recalled the Russian incidents where electro-magnetic fields were said to cause a host of health problems, including hypertension, heart attack, may be one of the touchier issues in the consideration of any milk marketing program since opinions vary among both individual dairymen and dairy groups concerning the merits of generic versus brand advertising.

Milk marketing

To be adopted in a referendum, the program would require only the approval of a majority of milk producers who vote.

Failure to vote would not constitute a negative vote in the consideration of a program.

The voting procedure does permit block voting by cooperatives for their membership. But individual members may still vote and negate that vote which was cast for them by the co-op.

It was also explained that a proposed program could be written that would supercede current federal milk marketing programs and the state could possibly become the funding mechanism for any federal orders operating within the state.

As opinions and comments are being collected from dairy interests throughout the Commonwealth, concerns of various types are already surfacing.

The relationship of any state plan with the existing federal marketing program is likely to be of major concern to Inter-State Milk Producers.

Producer participation in the Federal Order 4 Program already stands at nearly 90 percent.

While favoring statewide promotion, the question of the effect on the federal program may become a key consideration

Both the board and delegate body of Eastern Milk Producers have gone on the record in the past as being opposed to mandatory "tax-type" assessments and favor voluntary payments by producers.

Under federal order programs, producers can obtain refunds if they don't wish to participate.

Primary concerns are also being directed at the administration of the proposed program. Control of the funds and exactly how they will be used are two key matters being expressed by dairy group representatives and individual dairymen.

Dairymen already participating in federal marketing programs cite the need for a broader base of participation as a plus for a statewide mandatory program.

While participation in some federal order areas can run as high as nearly 90 percent in some parts of the state, it may be closer to 50 percent in other areas.

The rate of assessment will be the subject of considerable debate and discussion.

For example, Dairylea Cooperative has favored sixtenths of one percent as being adequate in recent referendum proceedings in New York State.

Also arising may be questions of what type of dairy products should be stressed in advertising.

In some areas, at least half of the milk is being used in manufactured products, indicating a need for their inclusion in advertising plans. But traditionally, fluid milk has been the center of promotional programs.

When the procedure gets to the point of a referendum, another essential factor will come into play.

This phase of concern centers on the amount of interest expressed by the individual dairyman in marketing activities.

Some producers point to Dairy Day programs, which in the past have attempted to stress both production and marketing.

While large gatherings attend the production portion of the program, the crowd always appears to dwindle decisively when the topic turns to marketing activities.

Live fowl cholera vaccine licensed for chickens

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Department of Agriculture officials have granted a license to American Scientific Laboratories of Madison, Wis., to produce the first live vaccine for pasteurellosis, or fowl cholera of chickens.

Fowl cholera is a costly and increasingly important poultry disease caused by the bacterium Pasteurella multocida.

Robert J. Price, senior staff veterinarian, veterinary biologics, with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the new product was licensed for use in chickens after USDA-required testing demonstrated its safety, purity, potency and effectiveness.

The vaccine, to be marketed under the trade name Avichol, is administered by stabbing a needle dipped into the vaccine through the wing-web. The initial vaccination is recommended at 6 to 12 weeks of age and repeated at 18 to 20 weeks. Immunity develops within four days.

Price said this is the first successful, government-approved live injectable fowl cholera vaccine developed for chickens. Such a vaccine was attempted by Louis Pasteur over 100 years ago but did not prove successful outside of the laboratory.

Before development of this new product, fowl cholera vaccination of chickens was possible only with killed P. multocida bacterin, administered by needle and syringe injection. The disease causes mortality in poultry flocks, and also reduces egg fertility and hatchability.

All vaccines, bacterins and other veterinary biologics marketed in interstate commerce must be licensed by USDA under provisions of the Virus-Serum-Toxin Act of 1913. The new vaccine, Avichol, is one of more than 800 products manufactured by some 40 firms under USDA licenses.

headaches, nervous exhaustion, drowsiness, and blood disorders.

"As a result," said Ponte, "the Soviet Union has strict rules over the amount and duration of microwave emissions from radio transmitters and radars a person can safely absorb. The U.S. by comparison, has no legal restriction for electromagnetic-radiation exposure, only an informal guideline."

Ponte was referring to the guidelines set in 1966 by the U.S. American Standard Institute that says any dose not exceeding .01 of a watt per square centimeter of exposed flesh is safe.

He recalled the discovery of the CIA in 1962 that the Soviets were beaming radar-like microwaves into the U.S. embassy in Moscow. "The radiation was .002 of the intensity the American guideline calls dangerous, but it was deliberate, aimed at the office of the U.S. ambassador from two buildings across the street."

In what was named the 'Moscow Signal', Ponte explained the CIA duplicated the radiation effects through experiments on monkeys. "Within three weeks there were adverse effects on the animals' nervous and immune systems

"Embassy personnel were not informed of the irradiation. Instead, they were asked to give blood samples to 'test for a disease in Moscow's water'. The tests revealed that a third had white-blood-cell counts almost 50 percent higher than normal — often a symptom of severe infection and also a characteristic of leukemia.

"In 1976, the U.S. State Department declared the Moscow embassy an 'unhealthful post', and metal window screens were put up to shield against the microwave beams. But 14 years had already gone by.

"Today those former embassy personnel exhibit a higher rate of cancer than the American average, and two U.S. Ambassadors in Moscow subjected to this microwave radiation have died of cancer.

Ponte also cited difficulties with the U.S. Navy's plans to build a radio system that would allow the President assured communications with undersea submarines in the event of war. Referred to as Project Sanguine, Ponte said a massive underground antennae with 30 million watts of power was studied.

Scientists doing the study found that the antennae effects could cause ducks and geese flying overhead to become disoriented, Ponte noted, and could cause high blood pressure in dogs.

The Navy's proposal, developed in 1968, was opposed by environmentalists in 1973. Voters at public meetings rejected the plan in 1976, said Ponte.

But, the Navy had begun to operate a miniature Sanguine in Wisconsin, Ponte noted, in order to prove the project's safety and efficacy. Their plans backfired.

"Navy technicians exposed over time to Extremely Low Frequency transmitters showed abnormally high levels of serum triglyceride, a symptom associated with strokes and coronary problems. While under the influence of the electric smog from the transmitters, some sailors suffered a decline in the ability to perform simple addition."

Are electric power lines absolutely safe for people, animals and plants? If one of these high tension lines crosses your farm, do you notice a difference in crops, livestock, or yourself? Scientists at Penn State and other universities continue to study the effects of electrical fields, and could benefit from in-the-field experiences.

to whether the bags had the required green tag for priority handling attached

The missing tag, the Post Office said, could have added to the delay

But Inter-State said it knows of no post office that does not open first class mail immediately.

The Lancaster Post Office did indicate it was sorry for the delay. A Post Office spokesman said they will continue to look into the problem and try to come up with a solution.

But Inter-State management and shippers are hardly placated.

The Co-op said its problems go back two years. At that time a small group of checks almost regularly ended up in Dallas, Texas.

Sometimes one group of checks would be misrouted, sometimes another.

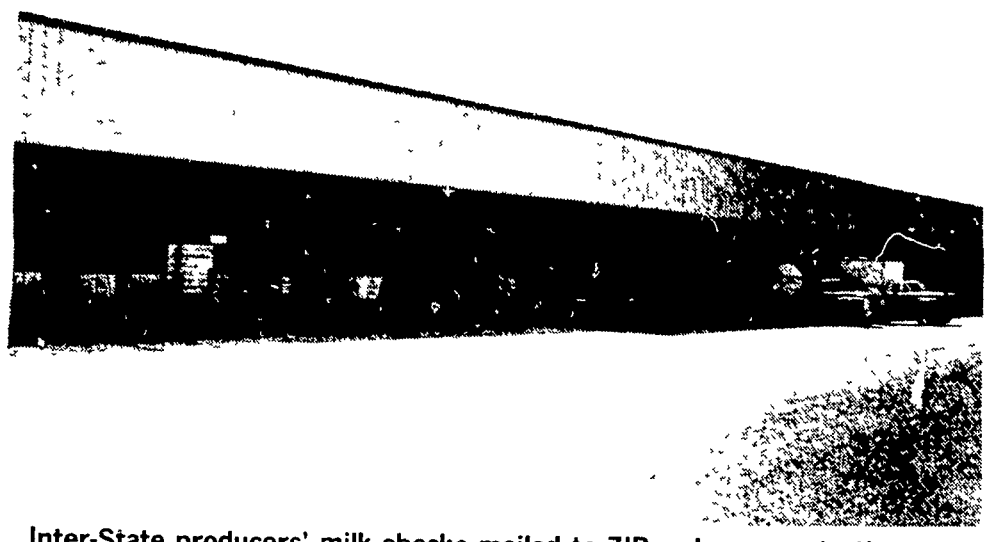
Since the ZIP-code area involved was 175 and since the Dallas ZIP-code is 752, the mail handlers presumed the first number on the code was not being read. Instead, they figured, the second pair of digits was being looked at and the mail was going to Texas.

The ZIP-code location on the letters was changed and this helped for a while, Inter-State said.

Deliveries into Lancaster County and nearby areas again continued smoothly until the latest incident this week.

Inter-State said it was particularly upset because it figures the checks were available for distribution to local post offices and rural routes but never made it off the Lancaster loading dock.

The Co-op mails checks twice a month—an event anticipated by dairymen throughout the Co-op's strongest county.



Inter-State producers' milk checks mailed to ZIP-code areas starting in 175 and 176 apparently sat in a mail sack here on the loading dock of the Lancaster Post Office, thus delaying the scheduled May 20 payment.

1979 milk production highest in 14 years

LANCASTER — The U.S. dairy industry produced more milk last year than in any year since 1965. Milk production in 1979 totaled approximately 123.6 billion pounds, up 1.7 percent or 2.0 billion pounds from 1978.

This increase in production occurred despite declining numbers of milk cows. In a trend toward fewer, more efficient cows that has continued for several decades, the average number of milk cows in the U.S., at 10,767,000 in 1979, was down 0.7 percent from 1978.

Increased production per cow made up the slack. Production per cow was up two percent or about 234 pounds in 1979. Each cow in the U.S. produced an average of 11,474 pounds of milk. That's 1334 gallons, or a year's supply of fluid milk and cream for 40 Americans - from just one cow.

States with the largest milk production last year were: Wisconsin, 21.95 billion pounds; California, 12.55 billion pounds; New York, 10.68 billion pounds; Minnesota, 9.15 billion pounds, and Pennsylvania, 8.06 billion pounds.

Production of many manufactured dairy products also increased last year. There were 2.19 billion pounds of American type cheese produced in the U.S. in 1979, 5.5 percent more than in the previous year and a record high for the second straight year.

Production of all types of cheese, except cottage cheese, totaled 3.71 billion pounds, also up 5.5 percent. Americans consumed approximately 17.9 pounds of cheese each in 1979, 3.4 percent more than the year before.

Butter production dropped only slightly; it was down 0.9 percent to 985 million pounds. Per capita consumption of butter remained about the same as in 1978. There were 30 million fewer pounds of creamed cottage cheese produced last year, for a 2.8 percent drop to 847 million pounds. However, production of lowfat cottage cheese was up 2.6 percent over 1978, totaling 155 million pounds.

Less nonfat dry milk for human food also was produced. The year's 907 million pounds was down 1.4 percent from 1978. Manufacture of frozen products also declined overall last year.

While ice cream production was up slightly, totaling 818 million gallons, production of ice milk, at 294 million gallons, was down 4.6 percent. Sherbet production dropped 8 percent to 45.8 million gallons

Trends for the decade point to fewer cows, more milk and cheese.

During the 1970's, total yearly milk production fluctuated from year to year, reaching a high of 120.0 billion pounds in 1972 and dropping to a low of 115.3 billion pounds in 1975 before beginning a steady increase to 1979's figure of 123.6 billion pounds. 1979's production was 6.4 percent, or 7.5 billion pounds, greater than 1969's total of 116.1 billion pounds.

The number of milk cows in the U.S. dropped every year during the past decade, and in 1979 was down 12.5 percent or 1.5 million from the 12.3 million cows in 1969.

Milk production per cow increased dramatically over the past ten years, up a whopping 21.6 percent or an average of 2,040 pounds for each cow in the nation.

There also was considerable change in the production of many manufactured dairy foods during the '70s. Most striking is the 86.5 percent increase in total cheese output from 1.99 billion pounds in 1969 to 3.71 billion pounds in 1979. Butter production was down 11.9 percent during the decade, and there was a 37.5 percent drop in the production of nonfat dry milk for human food. Ice cream production was up 6.8 percent.

Guernsey Queen

evening, a Gemutlichelt Nacht was held complete with an evening of German polkas. The Scandinavian and German ancestry of the people around Rochester was the reason this particular theme was chosen, but one could tell it suited Millie to a T.

Saturday morning, the girls went on a farm tour, and in the evening they drove to St. Paul and took a riverboat cruise down the Mississippi River with dinner and dancing. Sunday morning more tours, a pork barbecue and rehearsals were held, and Sunday evening after a prime rib dinner, Millie was crowned by Geraldine Carson, last year's queen. The crowning capped off the evening program in which the girls were interviewed and questioned.

Millie's question was "what if a stranger were to ask you what a Guernsey cow is — what would you say?"

Her answer was, "I would tell him that she combines business with pleasure. That she can consume all sorts of roughages and convert them into delicious milk. That in one quart of milk there is 19 percent more protein and vitamins than the average store-bought milk and that if everyone drank Guernsey milk they would be stronger and healthier. And if everyone was stronger and healthier it would be a happier world."

For her win, Millie received her crown, a trophy, a bouquet of yellow silk roses and her expenses will be paid during the coming year's official travels.

On Monday, the American Guernsey Cattle Club held a breakfast. Then a business meeting followed as well as a luncheon of wall-eyed pike which Millie described as delicious. The National Heifer Sale and Minnesota Convention Sale followed. Millie began her official duties at the breakfast and continued throughout the day leading the first heifer of the auction into the ring and running tickets back and forth. She also showed her parent's heifer a Deacon daughter due in July to Minnie's Choice. This production bred heifer brought $2200. While her schedule this past week was hectic, perhaps the toughest part was the fact that she went from Thursday to Tuesday without donning blue jeans.

Among the things she noted during her travels were the different feed handling systems for the longer winters in Minnesota's colder climate. She said the tulips were still blooming there last week. She said that from a plane it looks big and flat and square and she was intrigued by how cluttered with buildings and trees and hills the Pennsylvania landscape looks by comparison. She also said that the average herd size is more like 80 milkers rather than the 40 average around here. But her feelings were evident when she said one of the nicest things about going away is "that it lets you appreciate so much more what you have right here at home."

Getting to see different sides of people, different operations, and to learn more about her chosen breed are some of the advantages Millie expects to experience during the coming year. She said that her Pennsylvania reign has made her more outgoing and has formed alot of friendships. "Now when I go to a Guernsey function, it's just like one big happy family." she said. The only problem she could think of was the traveling — and that only because she gets motion sick.

One of the things she did while in Minnesota was to compare the breeding in the West to the Guernsey breeding around here. Offspring from Quantity impressed her and she would like to try some of his breeding.

Millie has 11 animals of her own. Four animals are milking. She said that she received a heifer from her family for Christmas and that in January she bought a heifer at the Guernsey Barn in Lancaster which is due any day now. She has mostly Winston breeding and is breeding them to Minnie's Choice. She said she's aiming for production and type.

Millie said that her home farm was basically well managed before her studies in dairy science. The 143 acre farm has 80 head of Guernsey cattle and between 35-40 milkers. Fourteen separate lots are fenced so the family can practice pasture rotation. The herd is on DHIA test and the family only uses AI on their animals.

"Basically, my dairy science studies gave me a clearer insight into more of the details involved in dairying." Since her studies, she has adopted two new management practices, however. They are the use of the electric dehorner, which she now uses on all the calves, and the use of top-dressing of feed for the higher producing cows.

While Millie looks to the future with calves such as this, she sees possibilities that would make her breed even more valuable, such as component pricing.

While a change in DHIA computations recently makes it more difficult for her to compare whether the new feeding has increased production, she feels that it has. And additionally, she said, the cows seem healthier, their coats are shinier and coincidentally there are seeing far less cases of foot rot.

While she makes it clear she is happy with her life right now as a paid fulltime employees on her parents' farm helping with all the farm chores including plowing and baling as well as all the feeding of the dairy animals, questions about her future elicit a pause. Then she says rather quietly that while her own future may include marriage and may hinge on what her brothers decide about farming, she definitely wants to remain in dairying and will do anything to see the home farm survive. She states with absolute determination that if a Holstein guy turns out to be Mister Right, "he'll have to understand that my Guernseys come along."

Millie Linde, back home on her parents' Lindenhof Farm near Oxford looks forward to her year as 1980 National Guernsey Queen.

Pennsylvania Department of Transportation's air traffic division to file a petition to have the zoning changed to create what is known as an airport hazard area.

Reigle said this term, hazard area, has been misunderstood by most of the people in the area and explained that the purpose of the zoning would be to prevent hazardous land uses from developing around the airport.

"I want to attempt to promote public relations in aviation, and to point out the value of an airport to the community," she said. "I want to try to clear up misconceptions."

What the new zoning would call for is maximum compatability of land use to air traffic on the airport land and surrounding areas. It calls for a designated area 2000 feet long, extending from the end of the runway and fanning out at an angle 15 degrees on both sides.

The farmers and others attending the meeting heard once again that this fan shaped zone would give added safety to pilots taking off or landing at the airport. If wind drift carried the plane to either side of the area during an approach or take off, the plane would not run into any obstacles.

Specifically, no permanent structure could be located higher than 35 feet within the hazard area. And, starting at the end of the runway, structures could not exceed one foot in height for every 20 foot of set-back distance.

Reigle pointed out there are already federal laws that provide for a 1000 foot distance to be free of obstacles. This new zoning would allow for 2000 feet.

The objectiveness of the presentation then began to disintegrate. Reigle told the group how she had personally interviewed people who had signed a petition against the airport rezoning. This petition was presented to the board of supervisors at the April meeting.

"I asked them two questions," she related. "One, who asked you to sign? And two, did you know what you were signing?"

The answer to the first question, she said, was obvious — the Brandts. Herold and Gladys Brandt, owners of the farm adjacent to the airport, have been the key figures in opposing the rezoning in that they are the landowners most greatly affected by the change.

Reigle went on to say that a number of the people she spoke to said they were returning a favor to the Brandts when they signed the petition. Some, she said, told her the Brandts were their friends and they didn't want to see the farm taken away from them.

"The petition," said Reigle, "was an attempt by Brandts to create opposition and defame the airport."

She stated farming is a highly compatible and desirable land use next to an airport.

Concerning the alleged damages to adjacent farmland as a result of downed and low flying planes, she said farmers get just as much if not more damage from snowmobile traffic, and she said their airport reimbursed the farmers for any damage on the spot—no questions asked.

Reigle's statements brought some audible "no's" from the Brandts, who said they never were paid back for the damages created on their property when a plane hit their harrow and when several landed in their small grain fields.

Donald Hoffer, a neighboring farmer and leasee of the Brandt farm, asked the planning board why the zoning had to extend to the adjoining properties.

"I don't think they have the right to tell the adjoining landowners what they can and cannot do with their land," he stated.

Reigle's attorney pointed out there is legislation pending in the State that will amend the airport zoning law to say that local legislative boards "shall" enact an airport zoning ordinance, rather than its present wording, "may".

Harry Zinger, a township resident, said that the airport doesn't want the land except in case of an emergency—they just want the air space.

Joe Eckenrode, a farmer in the township, stated that the whole thing (zoning revision) wouldn't have to be if the airport owned 35-40 acres on either side of its runway. "It's a cheap way to get the use of the land," he said.

Other statements from the crowd included: the new zoning was attempting to take the rights away from the Brandts and other farm owners as far as useability.

Defending their petition, Reigle's attorney explained the new zoning would not change the procedure the Brandts would have to follow to erect a corn barn or a silo at the present time.

He told the group that since their farm was zoned in 1975 as R-1, low residential, the Brandts would have to request a variance and get a permit to do the typical farm-type construction. He added that it would take the same procedure if the farm was partially rezoned AP-1.

The Brandts, unable to conceal their emotions, said "It would take nerves of steel to live where we live."

They spoke of incidents where airplanes would take off and would pass so low over their house that the landing lights shown in their downstairs bedroom window.

Just last week, they said, a plane flew between the house and barn and just barely missed the power lines and tree tops between their buildings.

"People don't realize what we're living with," Brandt stormed.

Brandt's attorney then asked the planning board "whose lands are being affected?" He pointed out that much of the affected land was owned by Reigles.

The attorney asked who would police the new zoning regulations. "The airport people can't police their airport now, so who's going to do it—the supervisors, the zoning board, the police?"

Harvey Krall, a farmer whose property is in the approach area on the opposite end of the runway from the Brandts' farm, said he'd like to put the noise and the lights of the airport in the bedrooms of each of the zoning board members, and they'd change their minds in a hurry.

The board members, consisting of several farmers, an agricultural engineer, construction contractor, carpenter, and an engineer for Hershey Foods, quickly pointed out they had not made up their minds about the petition.

They listened to the experience of a local farmer who explained that when a utility company wanted to use an area of his farm it bought an easement from him, and suggested the board make the airport buy the easement rather than have it zoned.

"It would be damn cheap for a bunch of guys like you if you didn't," the farmer added.

One of the board members asked the Brandts and the Reigles to defend their statements that the new zoning would devalue or not devalue the property, respectively.

Mrs. Brandt said she had been told by realtors that their farm had already lost $1000 an acre in value.

With one last appeal from a neighbor that the board protect every individual, the meeting was closed.

The board members, with arms folded across their chests, leaned against the conference table, and discussed the pros and cons in low tones.

In the mean time, the group of farmers gathered in the lobby and rather loudly discussed their opinions.

When the board members huddle broke up after roughly twenty minutes of discussion, the president Paul Geib announced they were deadlocked in their decision, and would meet again next Wednesday to finalize their recommendations.

Here's where LeHi preferred stockholders can write

ALLENTOWN — As reported last week in LANCASTER FARMING, a group of preferred stockholders of Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers has formed in opposition to the reorganization plans approved by co-op members last month.

The group, called Stockholders Protective Committee, says it plans to file suit against officers and directors of the diary to stop the plan which would leave them with 15 percent of the face value of the stock they own.

Preferred stockholders interested in joining the legal action can contact the Committee's organizers.

They include Willard Roth, R 3 Box 148, Coopersburg PA 18036. Roth's telephone number is 215/967-1821.

Also organizing the legal action is Harold Snyder, 2401 N. 5th Street, Perkasie PA 18944. His telephone number is 215/257-7582.

The two men are attempting to locate other preferred stockholders.

They are soliciting inquiries from others who may be interested in their legal action. They have retained a corporate attorney to argue their case.

Broiler placements up 11 percent

HARRISBURG — Placements of broiler chicks in the commonwealth during the week ending May 10 were 2,525,000, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

The placements were 11 percent above the corresponding week a year earlier, and nine percent above the previous week. Average placements during the past nine weeks were there percent above a year earlier.

Placements in the 21 key poultry producing states were 81,937,000, one percent below the previous week and two percent below the same week a year earlier. Average placements during the past nine weeks were virtually unchanged from a year ago.

Broiler-fryers slaughtered in Pennsylvania under federal inspection during the week ending April 30 totaled 2,109,000, with an average liveweight of 4.03 pounds.

Settling an estate, what are the steps

BY SHEILA MILLER

LITITZ — In this week's issue of Lancaster Farming we'll examine the procedure for settling an estate, and check out the qualities needed in a good executor.

No matter how morbid the subject of estate settlement is to an individual, each member of a family should be familiar with what needs to be done.

Important documents, such as the will, deeds to property, and policies for insurance, need to be discussed. The location of these important papers should also be shared with a spouse, children, or the appointed executor of the will.

If these details are worked out ahead of time, the trauma of death will not be shrouded with troubles of confusion and lost paperwork.

Now, let's assume the inevitable happens, and there is a death. What happens next in settling an estate?

The first step involves filing the deceased's will at the Register of Wills office in the county courthouse. This procedure, according to the Pennsylvania Farmers Association's Richard Dennison, is called probating or "proving" the Will.

"If the will appears to be in order, the Register will issue a document called 'Letters Testamentary'. That document appoints the person named in the will to act as executor and gives that person the legal power to administer and settle the estate."

The next step involves advertising the estate and the appointment of the executor in local newspapers and legal publications. By making the settlement procedure public information, the executor gives notice to any creditors of the deceased that they may file any legal claims against the estate within a specified time period, as advertised.

At this time, the executor should locate and inventory all personal assets of the decedent, which might include stocks and bonds, bank accounts, farm equipment, and real estate. These assets are then appraised and given a value as of the date of death for taxation and distribution purposes.

Any property that was owned jointly must also be appraised and assigned a value. But, this property will automatically pass to the surviving owner.

All of the valuations and the inventory of assets must then be filed with the Register of Wills. The decedent's bank accounts may be closed and transferred to an estate account, opened by the executor, for paying any bills owed by the estate.

The executor should make a list of all known debts, deductions, and liabilities, along with estimating the state and federal taxes the estate will owe. A plan for paying these debts and taxes should take advantage of all discounts and time extensions legally available.

Penn State's Circular 567, Estate Planning for Pennsylvania Families, recommends that "if sufficient funds are available to pay debts and taxes, the executor should arrange to distribute all personal property so that the risk of loss, damage, theft, or other property injury is eliminated".

Unless a time extension is applied for and granted, the Pennsylvania inheritance tax must be paid within nine months. If paid within 90 days a discount is allowed.

The Federal Estate Tax is also due in nine months.

So, it is up to the executor to see that the tax returns for the estate, are prepared and also the decedent's income tax return is filed.

If the executor feels it is advisable, a portion of the Pennsylvania Inheritance Tax could be paid within three months so that the estate taxes will be reduced by 5 percent.

The executor should then obtain the families or courts approval for the accounting and distribution of the estate. Keeping enough funds for any tax adjustments (after the tax returns are reviewed by the state and Internal Revenue Service) and to cover any unpaid bills, the executor can make arrangements to distribute the remainder of the estate.

Once all outstanding bills are settled, the estate can be closed and the executor dismissed.

The job of executor of an estate is not an easy task. Depending on the complexity of the estate, it may take years before all the details are worked out and settled.

Who makes a good executor? That depends on each individual case.

Sometimes a member of the immediate family will have the time and the knowledge to handle the estate without a hitch. Then again, it might require an attorney or bank to be able to work out the complex cases.

No matter who is selected, be sure they are honest, reliable and familiar with all the details of your estate prior to them needing to know. It's a tough job and anything that can be done to help things go smoothly should be done for the sake of the survivors.

Next week, we will look at another estate planning tool that works while you're living. It's called a partnership.

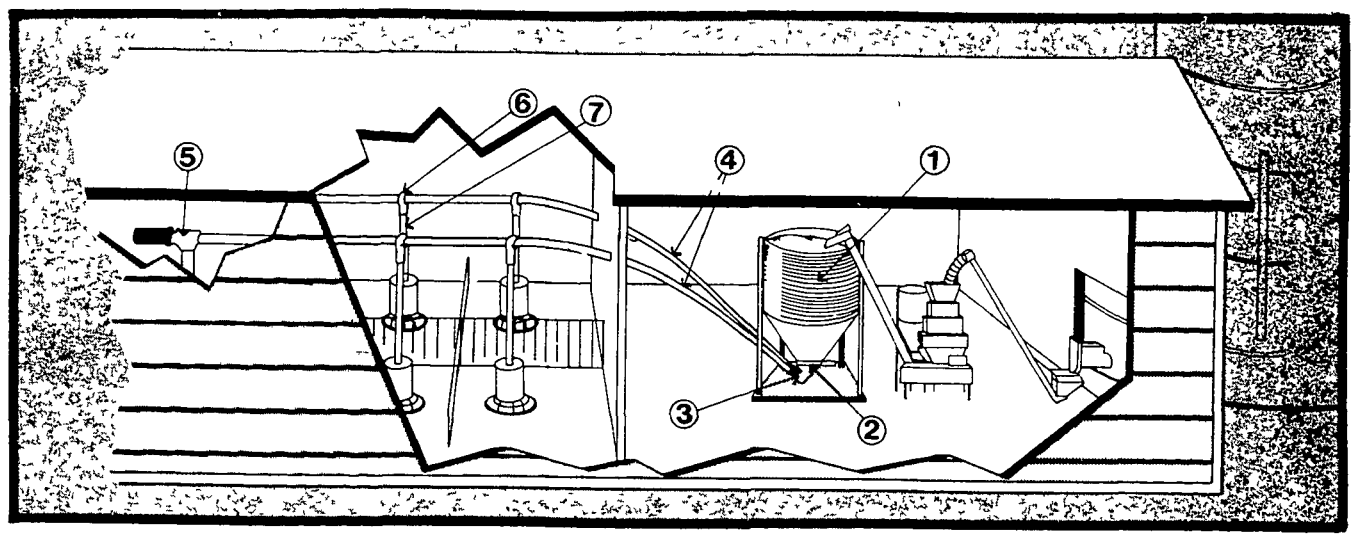
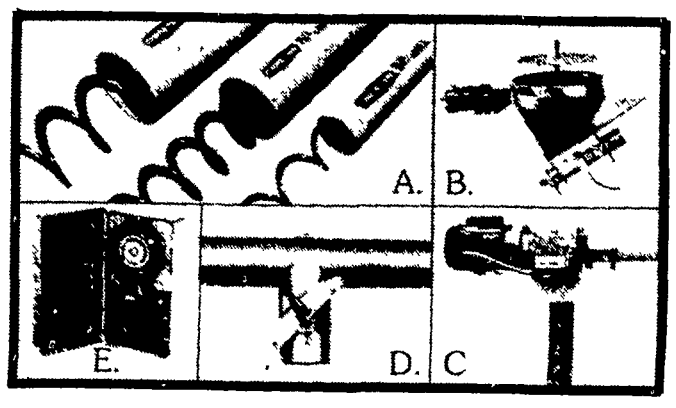
The system includes stainless steel bin boot and oversize auger tube with smaller auger.

CHORE-TIME® FLEX-AUGER® FEEDING SYSTEM

Your imagination is the limit when it comes to the feeding layout you can get with Chore-Time's patented FLEX-AUGER Feed Delivery System — it goes up, down, around, thru, over, or under. And it does it all without gears, corner cogs, or other energy-eating mechanisms. The secret is our sensible one-piece, continuous, spring-type "coreless" auger.



Typical feeding setup using new Chore-Time High Moisture Corn FLEX-AUGER System



A. Auger and tube for the 3 basic sizes of FLEX-AUGER Auger comes in one continuous piece to fit your specific building

B. Our 30° discharge angle single outlet boot with POSIFLO™ Feed Flow Control POSIFLO installs between bin and feed delivery boot Prevents bridging and "ratholing" of feed Boot also available in twin outlet version (as in diagram above)

C. High-efficiency Power Unit mounts at end of FLEX-AUGER

D. Outlet drops for all models of FLEX-AUGER have a shutoff

E. Time clock is available to accurately program feeding times System will also operate by control unit in one feeder

FLEX-AUGER®— proven components for flexibility in any feeding setup

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE TO THE FARMER from A B C GROFF on JOHN DEERE EQUIPMENT...

You'll find that John Deere prices are now among the lowest. That's because we have held our prices while most major competitors have continued increases. Keep this in mind when you hear of "discounts" offered by others. Be sure to check the facts from ABC Groff Inc. on price as well as on financing.

- WAIVER OF FINANCE CHARGES — TRACTORS. Buy any new John Deere or used tractor from your John Deere agricultural dealer and we will waive all finance charges from now until MARCH 1, 1981. (Includes Model 2040 through 8640 Tractors, used tractors, and any implements purchased with the tractor.)
- JOHN DEERE MONEY PROGRAM - 40- TO 80-HP TRACTORS. In addition to the finance waiver listed above, you can earn $200 in John Deere money from the purchase of a new Model 2040, 2240, 2440, 2640 or 2940 Tractor between now and October 31, 1980
- WAIVER OF FINANCE CHARGES — BALERS, MOWER/CONDITIONERS AND WINDROWERS. Buy any new John Deere or used baler, mower/conditioner or windrower and we will waive all finance charges from June 1, 1980 until the beginning of your 1981 use season.
- RENTAL FOR PURCHASE — TRACTORS. Rent any new John Deere farm tractor, use it through the fall work season, and then convert to a time sale agreement. Apply rental payments to the sales price On purchases completed after November 1, we will waive finance charges until March 1, 1981.

FARM & HOME REAL ESTATE
Smoketown, Pa.

Experience has proven again and again there is much more to selling or buying a farm than just saying yes when the man asks you. There are, of course, financial details, but don't forget, the emotional and physical details too. These are important and if not considered carefully, can cause problems later

We at Farm & Home Real Estate recognize this and want to assure you of professional help in all 3 categories.

We have many rural and farm properties in the Central PA area and also members of the Multi-list service of the Lancaster area. This means greater exposure for you when you list with us.

Lancaster County DHIA supervisor

Patti Johnson puts her love of dairy to the test

BY SUSAN KAUFFMAN
Staff Correspondent

Although farm women have had a place in the barn during milking time for as long as cows have been domesticated for their milk, only recently have women taken up the specified occupations relating to dairy farming such as veterinary medicine and milk sampling and testing to name a few jobs.

More and more women are taking their training and talents and applying them to once all-male employment areas. Patti Johnson, a twenty-one year old lass from York County has been a Dairy Herd Improvement Association Supervisor for the last eighteen months in neighboring Lancaster County. An interview with her recently at her home near Airville, Southern York County, gave her the opportunity to explain her reasons for undertaking this job and to share some of her experiences.

Patti has always been close to the dairy industry from a personal standpoint because she is the daughter of a dairy farmer. Patti and her two brothers and two sisters have grown up on the registered Holstein dairy farm in Lower Chanceford Township owned by their parents Mr. and Mrs. T. Edwin Johnson.

Patti, being the oldest of the family's children, took a serious interest in the work on the farm from an early age. And when she attended Red Lion High School she participated in the FFA programs available to her. She specialized in the dairy calf, cow and herd projects during her high school years. At the same time she also, along with the rest of her brothers and sisters, become involved in the 4-H dairy club in the area. Remarking that although she and her brothers and sisters did not always have the top ranking animals at the shows, she said, "It was good training for us, it was good for us to work on our animals and show them anyway."

Never being one to skip out on the work at hand, Patti has readily taken her share of the workload for granted and gone on to complete her tasks with energy. Even now when she keeps long hours as a supervisor for the association, she still puts in a lot of time helping with the chores at home. Not one at say much about herself, Patti did admit that perhaps it was her farm background which helped her to be chosen to fill a vacancy in the Lancaster County Association supervisor's staff in October of 1978.

Prior to answering an ad in Lancaster Farming concerning the job vacancy, Patti had worked since high school at a restaurant and at a farm supply store near her home. She recalled that some time before she saw the ad, there had been a similar vacancy in York County as well. She said, "I guess I was just out of school and had not really decided in time to answer the ad. When I saw the Lancaster County vacancy I decided to apply for the job." job."

"I called the head supervisor, Wilbur Houser, filled out the necessary forms and went for my interview with Wilbur Houser and a County Agent Alan Bair," she continued. "About a week later I was hired for the job," she added.

The job requirements Patti applied for and hoped to accomplish were well known to her because her father had been a part of the York DHIA for some time. Since Patti routinely helped with the milking on her parents' farm she had ample opportunity to see a testing supervisor (a term Patti says sounds very prestigous - too much so for her modest character) at work.

For those who do not know what a DHIA supervisor does, Patti explained that her task is to contact participating herds assigned to her for monthly visits to the farm during milking time to weigh and record total pounds of milk produced by each cow, take a sample of each cow's milk, properly package and identify each sample for each cow, record feed amounts and costs, breeding and freshening dates and other information pertinent to the computing of the actual production and profit or loss of each cow in each herd she is assigned to.

Homestead Notes

Since she must go to the various farms during the regular milking time (some twice a month) for one night and then the following morning milking, Patti's daily schedule is never the same. She gets up any time from 3 a.m. to 5 a.m. and returnes home from the evenings milkings any where from late afternoon to after eight o'clock at night.

Sometimes, she says, she is at a farm for as long as eight hours during the day and on other farms she may only be there a few hours. The time she must be on the farm depends on the number of cows being milked in the herd and the individual dairyman's management of the milking operation.

Her ability to work with so many variables such as ever changing hours, commuting to different farms each day and getting along with so many different personalities is second nature to Patti now that she has worked this year and one-half.

Another aspect of her job which also changes daily, or almost daily in most cases, is the method or equipment she uses from one herd to the next to weigh and sample the milk. Patti has 29 herds she tests at night and the following morning. She also has one herd which tests only one milking a month. In addition she has ten herds which are called owner sampler where the samples are taken by someone on the farm other than the DHIA supervisor. Of these thirty herds to which she goes to take the samples and record the milk weights, eleven have pipeline milking systems which require meters to be installed during testing to properly measure the amount of milk coming from each cow while being milked.

Ten other herds do not have pipelines so Patti takes a bucket and spring scales to these herds to hand weigh the milk. Several other herds are milked in parlors where weigh jars are a standard part of the milking system and only require proper reading and recording of milk weights and drawing out a sample. Some dariymen have their own meters which are nice for Patti she says because she does not have to carry them to and from the farm or need to wash them up. "The bucket and scales system keeps me warm in winter, she quipped, implying that the extra movements involved in lifting, pouring and dipping from buckets and scales keeps her busy.

No matter the equipment she uses at each farm, Patti records the pounds of milk and takes the samples to be later tested for butterfat and records the herd information required. Then when she gets back home sometime in the middle part of the day from the morning milking, she packages and wraps the records and samples to be ready for United Parcel to deliver to Penn State to be tested and finally recorded on a computer readout. The computerized information for each cow in the herd and herd information is then mailed directly to the dairy farmer. The monthly testing records tell the dairymen the amount of milk per cow produced, the amount of butterfat per cow, the profit over feed costs and many other factors helping dairymen to better manage their herds.

Patti says she likes the idea that her job helps people to keep their records and plan their dairy operations and she likes working around farm animals and on farms. Some day she would like to have her own farm, she said. Right now she is kept busy testing six days a week at other dairy farms, helping with the field work and chores on her parents farm and milking at home on Sundays.

Patti says she likes the field work best of all the work on the home farm. Her parents have corn silage, baled hay and haylage as their main crop work. They own ninety acres and rent eighty more from neighboring landowners. The Johnsons feed their crops to their registered Holstein herd, one half of which is polled. Patti said her father hopes to eventually have the entire herd polled.

Patti's sister Abbe has been testing in York County since last October, starting one year after Patti did in Lancaster County. Their younger sister Edwina and two younger brothers Chip and Keel all help out on the farm.

When Patti leaves the farm in the morning or early afternoon to go to test some herd in Lancaster County she packs up the papers, scales, buckets, plastic sample packets and the rest of the necessary equipment into the trunk of her sporty Trans-Am and heads out the lane. Her closest herd is eleven miles away and her furthrest herd is twenty-five miles away. Patti is one of sixteen Lancaster County supervisors. Although she is young, small of build and a woman as well, she says she has encountered no problems in her job related to being all three.

Recipe Swap

In addition to another recipe for Butter Basted Barbecue Chicken, we also have an answer to Kay Chapman's request for a Black Bottom Pie. So if you haven't planned a dessert for this weekend's cookout, why not give this rich dessert a try?

BLACK BOTTOM PIE
1 stick pie crust mix
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
2 eggs, separated
2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
3 tablespoons cold water
2 tablespoons rum or 2 teaspoons rum flavoring
1 ounce melted unsweetened chocolate, cooled
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
⅓ cup sugar

Prepare 9-inch baked pie shell as directed on the package. In saucepan, stir together ½ cup sugar, the cornstarch and salt. Blend milk and egg yolks. Stir into sugar mixture. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly just until the mixture boils. Reserve 1 cup of the mixture. Set aside.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Stir into the remaining hot mixture in saucepan. Stir in rum. Chill in refrigerator, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from the spoon. Combine chocolate and the reserved mixture. Pour into baked pie shell.

Beat egg whites and cream of tartar until foamy. Beat in ⅓ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time. Continue beating until stiff and glossy. Do not underbeat. Fold gelatin mixture into meringue. Spread on chocolate mixture. Chill at least 3 hours or until set. If you wish, garnish with whipped cream and shaved chocolate.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Our son, the farmer. Our son, the doctor. Our son, the minister Our son, the businessman. Etc, etc.

Words that might warm any parents heart.

But, our son, the con artist?

Let me explain.

"Mom," he came asking one evening last week, "Would you give me a penny if I found your garden shovel?"

Now that shovel was a sturdy, steel planting trowel, a well-built one I'd specially purchased just for my own use. It's 12-inch length had become an ingrown extension of my hand through last year's green season.

But others had coveted my precious tool. On any given day, it might turn up in the sand pile or left in the car trunk after a 4-H planting expedition here or there Sometimes it even lurked out beside the gutter where the mini-engineers had been building Boulder Dam Jr in the mud puddle

And it was lost. Hopelessly lost. My gardener heart was breaking, and search after fruitless search had left me emtpy-handed

Studying this dirt-smudged, innocent-looking face for signs of a trick, I sized up the angles

"I'll give you a nickel if you can find that shovel," I finally bargained back, uping the ante

I smelled a rat in the woodpile. After notifying the farmer that this mother was about to be taken across, we parked ourselves in the milking parlor doorway to watch the next move.

Slowly, slowly searching, just the tiniest faint hint of a grin in those blue eyes, the propositioner searched through the flower beds (I knew it wasn't there), on down through the yard, and beyond toward the basement porch.

Five minutes later he was back. Emptyhanded. No sign of the blue-handled shovel.

"Would you really give me a nickel if I found your shovel?" he challenged

"Tell you what; I'll give you a whole quarter if you find that shovel." I was suddenly remembering what new shovels, plus a trip to find the kind I wanted, might be worth.

You, of course, guessed the rest of the story. He earned his quarter. I got my shovel.

In self-defense, I can offer only one explanation for falling for this ages-old ruse

Would you believe I'm practicing to someday be a grandma?

N.J. Farm Bureau president dies

TRENTON, N.J. — Arthur H. West, president of the New Jersey Farm Bureau for the past 14 years, died last Sunday, after a long illness.

West also represented the Northeastern Region on the American Farm Bureau Federation board of directors from 1968-1973 and from 1977-1978. He also had served as a member of the AFBF executive committee from 1969-1973.

Active in Farm Bureau for many years, he was elected first vice president of the New Jersey Farm Bureau in 1962. He became acting president in early 1966, and in November of that year was elected president of the organization and its affiliated companies. In this capacity, he served as chief administrative and executive officer of the organization.

In 1972, he was elected president of the Farm Family Insurance Companies, a position he held until earlier this year.

West was born on a farm in Mercer County near Clarksville, N.J., on Nov. 30, 1926. He was graduated from the West Windsor Township and Princeton Public School Systems.

He and his wife, Jean, began farming in Mercer County in 1945. The present operation, 400-plus acres in Monmouth County, involves the production of greenhouse tomatoes, strawberries, peas, wheat bedding plants, flowers and soybeans. The farm operation has been under the management of Arthur Jr., the Wests' eldest son.

West was appointed by two New Jersey governors to serve on the New Jersey Rural Advisory Council.

West is survived by his wife, Jean; five children, Bonnie Lou, Judith, Arthur Jr., Robert and Carol; and several grandchildren.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

There are so many little and big things that combine to make our lives busy.

Yesterday I had over twenty phone calls which is a lot for me. One daughter phoned to say she'd be home for the weekend as she is a bridesmaid in a local wedding.

Some phone calls were in reference to a 4-H meeting in Lancaster and other calls concerned emptying and cleaning my mother's house to ready it for sale, while still other calls were from lawyers, doctors and neighbors.

However, the highlight of the day was a phone call from California from our daughter, Nancy, telling us that we were grandparents for the first time. She expects to come east in June and I think that I'll have to see the baby before I can fully realize that I have a grandson.

I recently read an article saying that homemakers can have a second career spanning over 20 or 25 years between when the last child leaves home and retirement age.

Well, they weren't talking to me as I'll probably be retirement age before my youngest finishes her schooling. I've often toyed with the idea of going to work outside my home, but after eight years in the business world before marriage, I'm contended with what I have now.

Besides answering the telephone yesterday, I did manage to do four loads of wash, buy and plant 28 tomato plants, run to the bank, copy enrollment sheets for our 30 4-H'ers, order asparagus from a local farm market to freeze, mend two pairs of jeans and write three letters.

I don't get up at the crack of dawn — only in time to catch the 7 o'clock school bus which stops one mile from our home; but, sometimes I do burn the midnight oil as it is usually quiet after 10 o'clock and that phone stops ringing, ringing, ringing.

Get out the grill, light up the coals — cook up a storm

Memorial Day usually brings several things to people's minds. The three most common ones are cookouts, planting geraniums, and vacation. While we can't help with the geraniums or the vacation, we have cookout recipes that will make the effort of going to the shed, getting the grill out and cleaning it up all worth the effort. Even if the charcoal's left over from last year and alittle hard to light, the barbecued chicken and all the trimmings here today will be just reward. So read on, and after you see how easy it's all going to be, why not invite some friends to share the picnic this weekend?

BARBECUED CHICKEN

3 fryer chickens (approximately 9 pounds)
1½ cups vegetable oil
2 cups white vinegar
4 tablespoons salt
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon poultry seasoning

Bring ingredients to boil. Simmer 3-5 minutes. Pour over the chicken pieces. Cover, marinate for 12 hours in the refrigerator. Turn top pieces to be sure they are well marinated. Grill over hot coals. Approximate cooking time is 45 minutes-1 hour.

Family cereal may not provide enough iron for infants

LIMA — Until babies are about six months old they usually need no food other than breast milk or formula. Precooked, enriched dry cereal mixed with water or formula is often the first solid food they are fed.

Enriched baby cereals—wheat, rice, barley, oatmeal, mixed and high protein have no added salt or sugar. They are convenient to use and are economical sources of several nutrients suggests Maryetta Dorricott, home economist.

These cereals are especially valuable as a source of iron. Family cereals like oatmeal, grits and farina are less expensive than the infant cereals but need to be cooked and, with the exception of cream of wheat, may not have the iron that babies need.

Recent dietary surveys show that babies switched early to family type cereals and other table foods usually don't receive iron in amounts recommended by nutritionists. When shopping, compare unit prices to determine the best buy. Precooked baby cereals already mixed with fruits cost considerably more than the plain cereal.

Ladies Have You Heard?

GET READY FOR COOKOUTS

Leaves on the trees, flowers in the yard, children playing baseball in the park—spring is here.

Another sure sign of spring is the aroma of meats being grilled out-of-doors. If you are one of the 75 percent American households that cook outside in good weather, you'll be interested in these suggestions to make grilling safe, simple and fun.

Start by checking your grill and equipment. The grill should be clean and free from corrsion. Supplies you need include padded mitts, a widemouth jar of vegetable oil, a basting brush, a spatula, tongs, a grill scraper and a box of aluminum foil.

Store your supplies in a portable caddy under your grill or in a nearby dry area. To make clean up easy, line the grill with heavy-duty alumnium foil, shiny side up. This also helps radiate the heat for faster cooking. At the end of the meal, simply fold the foil around the cooled ashes and discard.

To prepare the fire, stack the charcoal briquets in a pyramid. This shape helps them light faster. You have a choice of fire starters—electric probe types which emit no odor, lighter fluid, jelly or solid fibrous cubes.

Don't rush the process; charcoal needs about 40 minutes of burn time to build up a good bed of coals. The fire's ready when the coals are covered with a fine grey ash during the day or are glowing red after dark.

Instant-starting charcoal that lights with one match and is ready to cook in about half the time of regular charcoal is also available.

What's the ideal temperature for grilling? In most cases, moderately hot is best. For a quick temperature test hold your hand at cooking height, palm down. If you can keep it there only two seconds, the fire's hot; three seconds, moderately hot; four seconds, medium; five seconds, low. If you need to increase cooking temperature, add more briquets around the edges of the fire

TRAVEL CONSIDERATION

Are you traveling on vacation this summer? It is not to soon to start planning in order to get the maximum out of your recreational dollar and your free time.

Vacations should be divided into three parts, anticipation—the getting ready, participation—the doing, and finally reflection—the savoring of good memories. All these steps can be made better by good planning.

Take anticipation. Now is the time to write for time tables for trains, ferry schedules, the AAA for "trip tickets", and to check bus prices. Often State Travel Agencies will send you a free map and brochures touting their attractions. Those people walking or backpacking should be locating the topographic maps appropriate for the area they choose to see.

If you are traveling outside the U.S. it is time to get the passport and to check several travel agents for the most economical fare. Check the fine print on airpline package "deals" on tours. Ask all the questions before hand of your travel consultant to prevent "surprises" later. Don't forget to read about where you are going in the library and go to free travelogs.

Whether your vacation is spent far from home or near, get into it with all the senses. Talk to everybody who will or can Eat the local foods and special beverages. Try common things such as tubing, bicycling, driving a horse cart, or steering a canal boat.

Prepare to record your experience. Buy film ahead of time. Know to take title pictures of town signs and places, so you can show to others and remember yourself later. Keep a dairy. Make a scrap book. Write a poem about the way you feel when you are in a strange, beautiful place. Record on tape your thoughts, the sound of the wind, street noises, all the interesting and different things

And don't forget, if you don't take the children they'll want to know where you were and what you did. If you take the kids, let them assist in making a record of the experience. Above all have fun.

Now is a great time for a wardrobe inspection

YORK — Now that signs of summer are in the air, it's a good time to check closets, drawers and storage boxes to sort wearable and repairable children's clothing, says Joan Lamberson, York home economist.

Check all garments for faulty zippers, ripped seams or pockets and stretched elastic. Try to repair these as soon as possible so that the garments may be used while they fit the child.

Replace missing buttons and lengthen pants and dresses that are too short. If there is no hem to let down, consider adding a contrasting band to the hemline. End-of-season fabric sales may provide suitable fabric at a low cost

If you child's shoes are scuffed but still fit, polish the shoes and replace shoe strings. Wash soiled tennis shoes and replace dingy shoe laces with new ones.

Allow your children to help make choices on repairs, items to store away for later use and items to discard.

Spread wood ashes away from lawns

LIMA — Wood ashes should not be used on established turf or for topdressing on a garden advises James McKeehen, Delaware Co. agricultural agent.

They can be of benefit if they are applied and tilled into the soil when establishing a new lawn or garden, and will help to reduce the acidity of the soil as well as provide potash.

Light applications would not harm a lawn, but would not be of much benefit either. In addition, they would be difficult to spread evenly and if children or pets play in the lawn they would track the ashes into the house.

Philadelphia and Derry FFA's initiate cultural exchange

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia and Derry FFA Chapters participated in an activity new to the FFA: The Agri-Cultural Exchange Program.

Advisor James Tatro and six members of the Philadelphia FFA - Hope Niblick, Lori Doman, Karen Takakjy, Monica Hough, Brian Godfrey, and Rose McCloskey - were hosted respectively, by Derry advisory Dr. Campbell, Amy Winklosky, Marlene Petro, Bonnie Palmer, Connie Palmer, Chris Doyle, and Glenda Barnhart. During the exchange, the Philadelphia and Derry members participated in activities including visits to area farms and agri-businesses and attending Derry's annual chapter banquet.

Glyn Boone, Pennsylvania's State FFA President from Derry, conceived the idea for a chapter exchange program that would give FFA members across the state the opportunity to experience cultural and agricultural ways of life different from their own. Glyn worked closely with State FFA Secretary, Kathy Jones, of Philadelphia to arrange a pilot exchange between their respective chapters.

Hopefully, the success of this first exchange will encourage chapters throughout Pennsylvania to participate in this educational experience.

A 1.9 percent decrease in the Western Corn Belt states of Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas, Nebarska and the Dakotas.

A 2.9 percent decrease in the Mid-South states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Oklahoma and Tennessee.

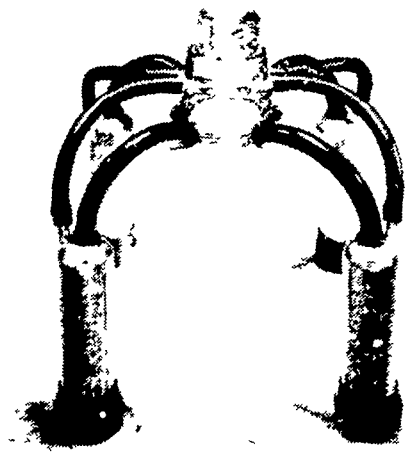
WITH AMERICAS NU-PULSE



An 11% Increase in Production for Bodmin Milking Units Compared with Other Conventional Type Units has been Obtained in a Trial at Massey University.
The trial showed approximately an 11% production increase in favor of the Bodmin Nu-Pulse Twins.
The test was made on identical twins. During the experiment it was noted that the wide base of the Bodmin Claw enabled the teat cups to be readily attached to mis-shapen udders. The results indicated that it is able to milk successfully at lower Cluster weights than the conventional machine. Consequently, there is a lower incidence of cup slip and fall.

THOUSANDS OF UNITS INSTALLED IN PENNSYLVANIA

Expanded tobacco program open for Lancaster farmers

LITITZ — Tobacco producers in Lancaster County have several new options to assure themselves a return even if they do not get a crop this year.

In view of the blue mold disaster which has taken 90 percent of Cuba's 1980 crop and is ravaging the burley belt, Lancaster County growers may be interested in the expanded Federal Crop Insurance program available to protect tobacco crops.

Growers have until May 31 to sign up for the FCIC coverage.

According to Johnnie F. Perdue, FCIC district director for the Harrisburg region, there are several new twists in the 1980 program.

This year the insurance is available at three levels of protection and the farmer has three price elections to value any production lost due to natural hazards under the insurance plan.

Farms managed as separate units with separate records can be covered by individualized insurance programs.

FCIC will insure tobacco crop against unavoidable loss of production or reduced tobacco quality.

Causes of loss could include adverse weather conditions, insects, plant disease, wildlife, earthquake, or fire occurring within the insurance period.

The program does not cover losses due to neglect of the insured or his employees, failure to folow recognized good farming practices, damage from the backing up of water by any governmental or public utilities dam or reservoir, or any cause not specified in the policy.

In past years, the farmer was offered a single level of coverage on his crop. This amounted to about 60 percent coverage on the crop.

For 1980, the farmer can choose among 50 percent, 65 percent, and 75 percent coverage rates.

The FCIC policy will guarantee both pounds of tobacco produced, and the quality of the product.

Cost of protection ranges from a low of $8.90 per acre for a low production level, low price of 40 cents guarantee; to $29.30 per acre for a high production, 60 cents per acre policy.

Perdue explained the two ways which a farmer can obtain a payoff on his policy.

A farmer's level of production, of course, is determined by historic data.

Take for instance a farmer whose records indicate a reasonable expectation of 1440 pounds production. Due to blue mold, he gets only 1000 pounds production.

FCIC will then pay off on the 440 pounds per acre he did not get, as long as he followed proper farming practices. Among these, FCIC is recommending but not requiring, the use of fungicide against such threats as blue mold.

The farmer also will have elected one of three prices per pound, 40 cents, 50 cents, or 60 cents.

This will determine the payoff.

Another for instance would be a similar farmer who is insured for a 1440 pound crop and makes 2000 pounds.

But due to hail damage the quality of his crop is reduced.

Rather than realizing the market average price of 70 cents a pound, the farmer gets only 35 cents.

FCIC figures the payout on the basis of what the farmer's price was. Since the farmer got only half of the market price on a full crop, they figure that's the same as geting full price on half a crop.

In this case, the farmer would have his payout figured on 1000 pounds (half of the 2000 pounds actually produced) at whatever price rate he elected to choose for his policy.

The payout will be reduced by 35 percent if the crop is never harvested. FCIC figures about 35 percent of the production expenses incurred are the result of harvesting the tobacco.

Deadline for farmers to sign up for the coverage is May 31. But premiums do not have to be paid on the insurance until after harvest. This reduces a farmer's early out-of-pocket expenses.

The insurance is tax deductable as an operating expense provided the premium is paid by December 31.

Farmers interested in additional information on the tobacco program for 1980 can contact John Herr, Box 54, Mt. Joy PA 17552; or Paul VanCleve, 915 Mondale Road, Lancaster PA 17601.

This year, farmers outside of Lancaster County are not eligible for the program. But pending legislation, now tied up in Washington, D.C. may change that next year and make all-county, all-crop coverage available in the future.—CH

Easton firm's license pulled for failure to pay

EASTON — The Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act license issued to John R. Hocking Jr., doing business as Van Doran Produce Co., in Easton, Pennsylvania, was suspended April 17th, after the firm failed to pay a reparation award of $2825 set by the USDA in favor of three Pennsylvania dealers of four lots of onions purchased in April and May 1979.

The firm failed to answer charges, and the USDA ordered payment of the amount claimed, according to the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

The firm is not eligible to operate in the produce business under PACA until the award is paid. Hocking may not be employed by or affiliated with any PACA licensee without USDA approval.

Under PACA, all interstate traders in fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables must be licensed by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

The Act, administered by the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, establishes a code of good business conduct for the produce industry.

USDA is authorized to suspend or revoke any trader's license for violating the Act.

How to trick the tufted budmoth

BIGLERVILLE — Fading apple blossoms signal an eventual need to control pests in an orchard but the actual timing is the subject of extensive research and exacting management by orchard operators. Sometimes natural enemies provide the control that negates one or more sprayings.

Helping fruit producers predict which pests will be controlled by natural enemies or predators and which will need chemical controls are scientists at the Fruit Research Laboratory near Biglerville. The laboratory is operated by the agricultural experiment station at Penn State.

One tool used by the scientists is an artificially scented trap that plays a dirty trick on male insects such as the tufted apple budmoth. Larry A. Hull explains the scent used resembles the sex-luring odor of a female moth. These traps are used to sample populations of the budmoth for the purpose of determining the most opportune time to apply sprays for control of the harmful pests.

While such concepts have been used by apple producers for a decade in this south-central area, some research programs associated with the concept are new this year.

One area of the research was funded last fall by a grant from the federal Environmental Protection Agency in hopes that ecological and feasible measures could be refined for more precise solutions for control of pests such as the fruit-loving tufted apple moth and plant diseases.

Newer aspects involve physiological disorders in the plant and soil environment, nutritional deficiencies of trees, and more extensive knowledge of orchard culture under new production practices.

The bill for damages caused by all apple pests runs about $4.5 million worth of apples each year in Pennsylvania orchards.

Director of the project involving a number of scientists is Dr. Larry A. Hull, assistant professor of entomology. He says it involves the concept of integrated pest management which often is referred to by three initial letters, IPM.

The project is designed to reduce pest damage to tolerable levels through a combination of controls including efficient and selective chemicals, cultural practices, and management of natural enemies.

"While there is a need for chemical sprays in orchard programs, our ideas on pest control are changing," he says.

"The idea of eradicating insect pests is impractical. Today, we're more concerned with keeping their populations below levels that cause economical losses. For example, we've determined the densities of certain pests that an orchard can tolerate before it pays to spray."

Hull points out that apple production in Pennsylvania is affected by a complex and inter-related set of factors which must be managed to produce high quality fruit.

This often means the apple grower must control about 20 important insects and mites in addition to 15 or more diseases. To combat these problems a grower must apply 6 to 12 protective sprays, involving combinations of pesticides throughout the growing season. Cost of chemicals alone may range from $50 to $150.

The science of using natural controls and chemicals requires substantial expertise.

An IPM solution also must reflect changing production methods. Growers now are shifting away from older and larger trees. New plantings have smaller trees and higher densities of trees per acre. Advantages are harvesting efficiency and greater yields per acre.

Working with Hull on apple problems are professors of plant pathology Kenneth D. Hickey and Richard F. Stouffer; William M. Bode, assistant professor of entomology; George M. Greene, associate professor of pomology; and Paul D. Mowery, an entomology research assistant who also is a computer modeling expert.

YOU'VE HEARD THE TALK.

There's a better way to dry grain. It's called CHILLCURING™ because it means CURING without heat. Here's what the talk is all about.

THE GRAIN

Every kernel of grain is alive when it comes out of the field It is a seed, able to grow because it has the ability to take on moisture Likewise, it can be kept in a state of preservation by removing the moisture already in it

But by heating the grain to dry it, the seed life is destroyed

By removing heat and moisture from the grain, it becomes dormant, and stays alive Then it can ripen to full weight, losing only water while keeping valuable protein, starches and sugar

THE SYSTEM

It's simple Grain goes from the field right to the bin. With the unique AIRFRAME™ and AIRFLOOR™ the grain rests on a solid bed that allows maximum ventilation

Clean dry air is the best curing medium for the grain GRAINLAMPS™ provide electric sunshine, cleaning and drying the air beneath the floor, before it passes through the grain

Fans force air under the floor Rising through the grain, this dry outside air carries away moisture and heat

At the peak of the bin a jumbo 40" turbine, the WHIRLCOOLER™, puts nature to work for you Wind and rising air keeps it turning, venting the system naturally

A special HARVESTAT™ Control System monitors the curing process A simple setting controls the GRAINLAMPS™ to make use of free, natural air

THE FACTS

1. You can't beat Nature. HARVESTALL GRAIN CHILLCURING™ uses the same elements that ripen and preserve grain if left to itself: free flowing air and infra red rays (sunshine).

2. CHILLCURING™ has been tried and proven in 17 states on over 3000 farms The research is in: CHILLCURING™ WORKS!

3. The CHILLCURING™ system uses only the electricity to power fans and lights, using about 1½ KW hrs. per bushel. Compare that cost to other systems that use increasingly expensive fuels to get disappointing results.

4. The grain goes from the field to the bin and stays there till you need it Save time and money at harvest with the one step HARVESTALL CHILLCURING™ and storage system

5. If you're in the market for grain storage, you owe it to yourself to look further into HARVESTALL GRAIN CHILLCURING™

Ain't cha got nuttin' else, Doc?

A reader asks:

Other than T B Z , what wormers are considered safe for pregnant and/or lactating dairy goats?

Dr. Sheaffer comments:

I feel most of the wormers of the thiabendazole family of compounds would be safe for lactating dairy goats providing that the milk withdrawal time has been determined. For most of these compounds, the withdrawal time is 96 hours or eight milkings.

In the case of pregnant goats, do not administer any worm medication during the first trimester, which would be the seven weeks following breeding After the first trimester, T B Z can be used at the recommended dosages

Low level organophosphates in the feed have been used in dairy cattle during pregnancy and lactation. This same product may be safe and effective for dairy goats. Consult your local veterinarian for recommendations on organophosphates.

A relatively new wormer for horses and dogs has been shown to be safe during pregnancy. The family name is Pyrontel. I do not know if milk withdrawal time has been determined for the Pyrontel wormers.

Lenomisole is a T B Z related compound I feel would be safe at recommended dosages during the last two months of pregnancy It is not cleared, however, for lactating animals.

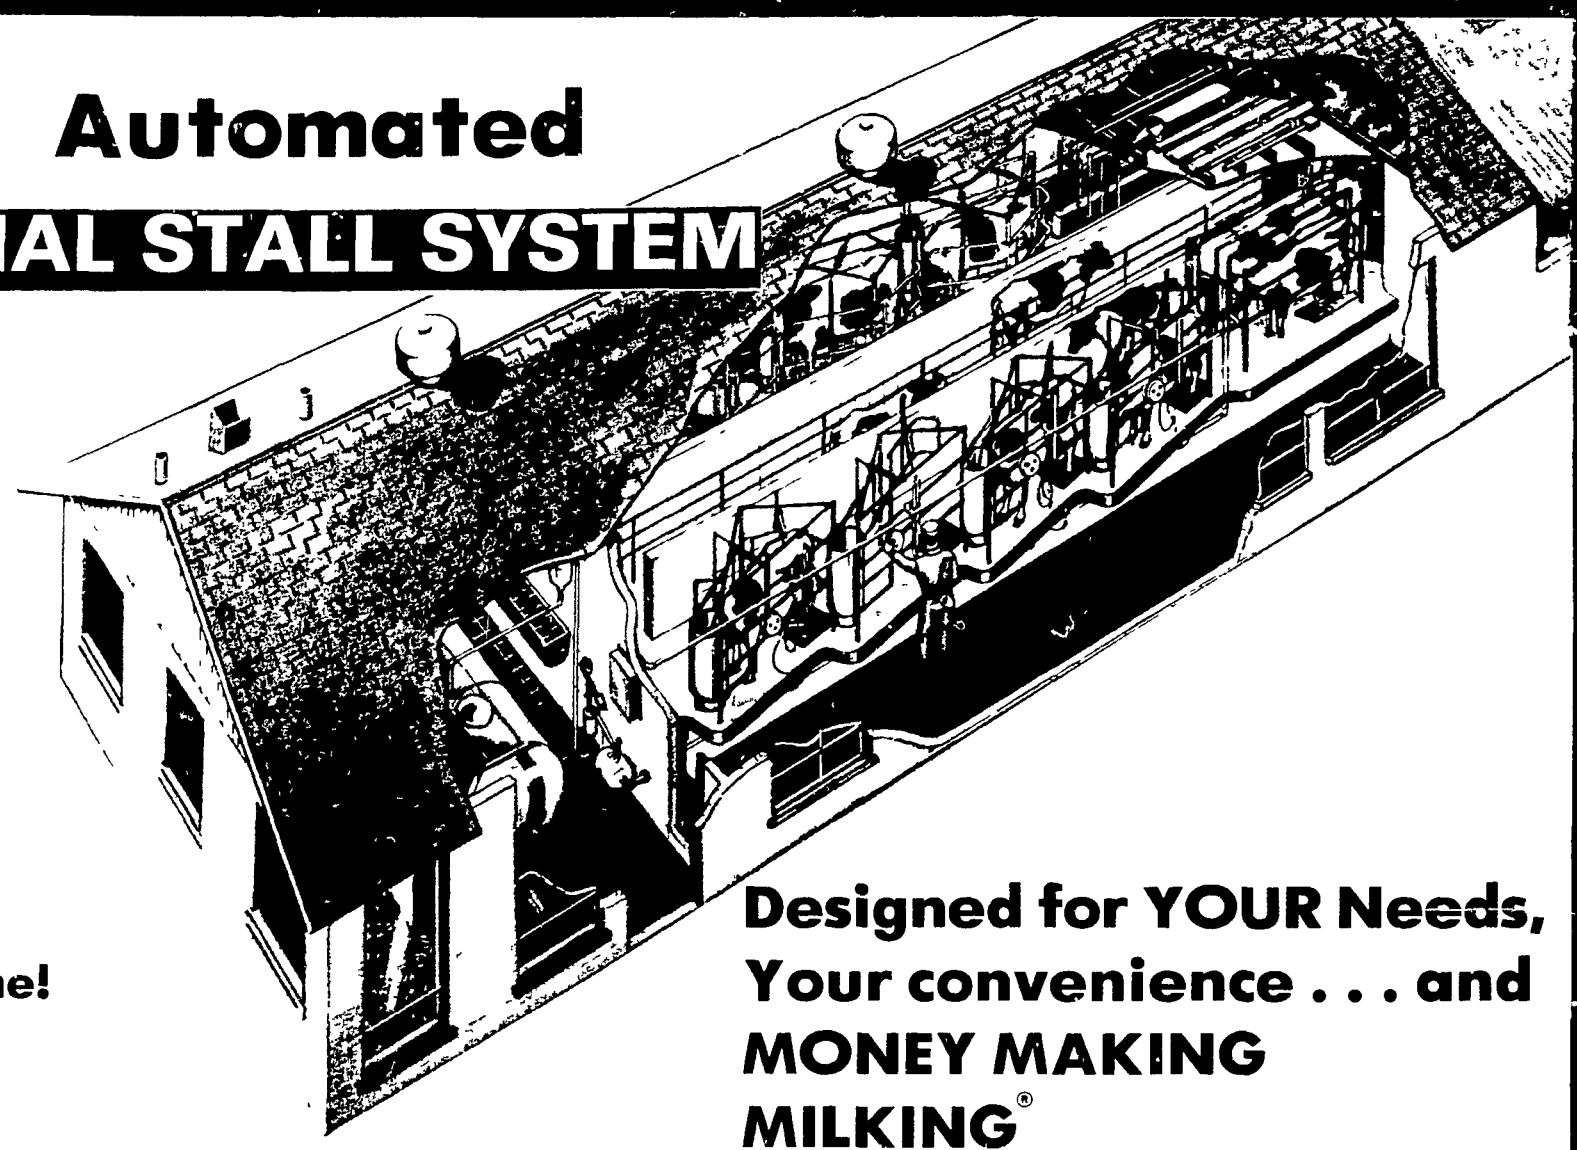
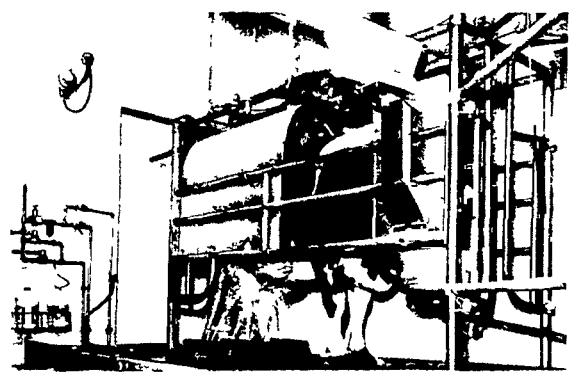
SURGE

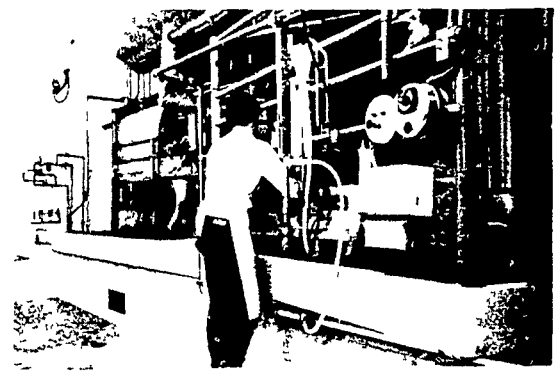
Automated DIAGONAL STALL SYSTEM

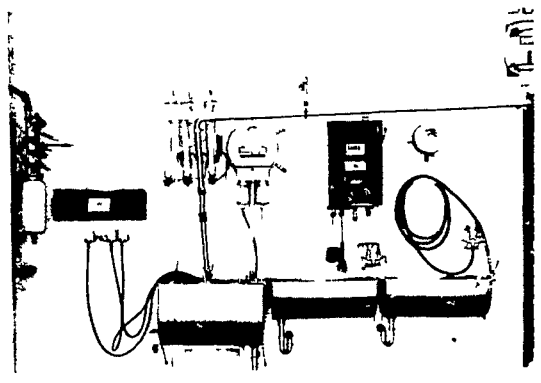


It's like having an extra man at milking time!

Designed for YOUR Needs, Your convenience . . . and MONEY MAKING MILKING®







If it's LARGER DAIRY PROFITS you're looking for — take time to see your Surge dealer now! Hundreds of dairymen have realized this "larger profit" goal by installing a Surge Automated Diagonal Stall System in their new or remodeled milking parlors.

Of course, larger dairy profits come only when proper dairy management is combined with a successful dairy system. You can add more cows, expand your facility, buy new labor saving equipment — but unless you invest in the RIGHT system of milking, you won't reach the PROFIT levels you're looking for.

You can milk those additional cows and milk them properly in a Surge Automated Diagonal Stall System. Good cow milking is not sacrificed for "cows per hour" efficiency — you get both! We encourage you to keep a good man in the milking parlor — and we make it easier for him to do a proper job.

Having good cow milking — you will get MORE MILK — with the same feed ration and the same production cost. Your labor costs are reduced because you produce more milk per man-hour.

A Surge Automated Diagonal Stall System may very well be the answer to your search for larger dairy profits.

Review those leasing options

LITITZ — Wrong decisions which are made now on leasing deals can show up as losses on the profit sheet later.

Ira Dumont Gouge, President of Baldwin - United Leasing said that. "tight money and high interest rates are causing many farmers to consider leasing as an alternative to equipment purchase". The executive went on to point out that, "while leasing is a very good management tool for farmers, careful attention should be given to the conditions and terms which are written into contracts".

He said not all contracts are leases which will be allowed by IRS.

"Conditional Sales Contracts are often confused with leases because the terms of the contract, not the words 'lease agreement', determine what is (or is not) a 'true' lease in the opinion of the Internal Revenue Service", says Gouge.

"The result is that farmers can be denied the financial privileges which are allowed in true leasing if they unknowingly enter into an arrangement which constitutes a conditional sales contract."

Gouge and Paul F. Bachman, Vice President of the Ag Leasing Division made the announcement Monday following what they describe as "a mass consideration of leasing by the nation's farmers".

They noted inquiries directed to Baldwin-United have escalated at unprecedented rates, an indication that other sources in the industry are also receiving an upsurge of interest from farmers.

"We're concerned that many farmers are entering into equipment contracts which are not beneficial for them in the long run", says Bachman. He went on to point out that within the last 30 days stepped up programs for leasing arrangements, conditional sales contracts and plain rental programs have been launced by equipment manufacturers, and other credit sources.

Gouge and Bachman further point out that, the majority of these programs are not 'true' leases because they offer minimum options which are substantially below fair market value. When IRS comes calling, these sources will say 'we made a mistake'.

"Knowing who you are dealing with is more important today than it has ever been in the past. Many leasing companies are curtailing their operations, selling off their leases or not taking any leases because they do not have sufficient funds. As a result of economic conditions, many of the fast buck operators have moved into financing and leasing, while promising the moon and stars with their foreign oil or German contract.

"You'll lose that deposit or the sale if the leasing company connot perform at closing ... so when they start checking you out, you should be checking them out. Remember, it's your money," Gouge said.

He concluded that, while rate is an important factor in a lease, it is not the most important because it is not uncommon to have organizations to "low ball" the rate and then continue to return to re-negotiate.

"This is especially true in view of the current, volatile state of interest rates", concluded Gouge.

Bachman, who heads marketing operations for the firm confirmed that leasing activity through the company is currently higher than the amount which was projected year-to-date for 1980.

"We've established firm guidelines in our true leasing considerations which help to assure that our clients are doing the right thing", said Bachman.

"While we certainly wantt leasing business", said Bachman, "we're not willing to take it at the expense of the farmer. We would have to live with that mistake later on when difficulties arose". Thus, he indicated that all lease applications are being reviewed in light of long-term soundness.

"Panic measures taken by a farmer now, might not be right for him in a few months", says Bachman. "We're doing all we can to serve farmer's equipment needs, but we want clients who will stay ... not clients who will suffer in the future if we misguide them in leasing decisions".

The executives concluded their leasing obervations by saying that farmers should involve their CPA's, bankers and others as they consider leasing and/or conditional sales contracts. "Short range and long range implications of such decisions should be considered, regardless of current economic conditions", they say.

Berks County holds 4-H alumni night

LEESPORT — The County Council of the Berks County 4-H program sponsored an alumni night at the Berks County Agricultural Center, here, Thursday, May 15.

The honored guests were brought up to date on the events planned for this year and progress being made on the County 4-H Center, which is scheduled to be built behind the Berks County Agricultural Center.

Richard Kauffman, 4-H Assistant, also explained the important role 4-H members are taking in the Woodburners Expo. Last year over $3000 was earned during the event to be used in building the proposed Community and Livestock Buildings of the 4-H Center. "This year, we expect to make even more money," Kauffman explained. The Expo was held for the first time last year and is expected to increase this year. 4-H'ers will help make announcements, park cars, and direct traffic. The Woodburners Expo will be held Sept. 6-7 the assistant said.

The alumni were also shown a slide presentation of the activities 4-H members were involved in so far this year, and also some past activities as well. LS

A new wrinkle in home energy conservation

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — According to the Department of Energy, manufacturers will soon be putting a new yellow and green energy efficiency label on major appliances.

Refrigerators, freezers, dishwashers, clothes washers, water heaters and room air conditioners will bear the label. Home furnaces will have labels directing the consumer to an information booklet provided by the manufacturer.

Among other things, the label will compare models and estimate annual energy cost at specific energy rates.

Because the seven major appliances included use 78.2% of home energy, the consumer should be able to save a considerable amount of cash and energy by shopping wisely using these new labels.

If you are considering a new appliance, it may pay to wait until the new labels appear and then use the information provided.

IMPROVED!

LIQUID HAYLAGE-ACTIVATOR 16%

The basic ingredient in Haylage-Activator 16 is refined blackstrap molasses Molasses has been added to grass as it is chopped for many years to improve the resulting silage. Europeans were making grass silage in trenches in the mid 1800's, many times with very poor results Molasses was added to this grass silage with a tremendous increase in the quality of the silage For over 40 years our customers have been adding refiners molasses to greatly improve the smell, appearance, consumption and performance of the cattle fed this Haylage Several years ago we developed Haylage-Activator 16 which has been specifically formulated for the addition to chopped grasses, rye, etc going into the silo These are lacking in energy, many times are low in protein and are almost always lacking in certain minerals Sometimes Haylage is not very palatable Haylage-Activator 16 will corect all of these deficiencies of an otherwise excellent feed No "extenders" or non-nutrient carriers are added to Haylage-Activator 16 We have taken molasses, which has already proven its value as a grass silage energy additive, added additional protein sources and minerals which are lacking in grass to make a complete supplement for Haylage

LS's Grassland FFA conducts first grade tours of Brubaker farm

Jeff Keemer gave the youngsters a tour of the farm shop and shows a group the various tools used for repairs.

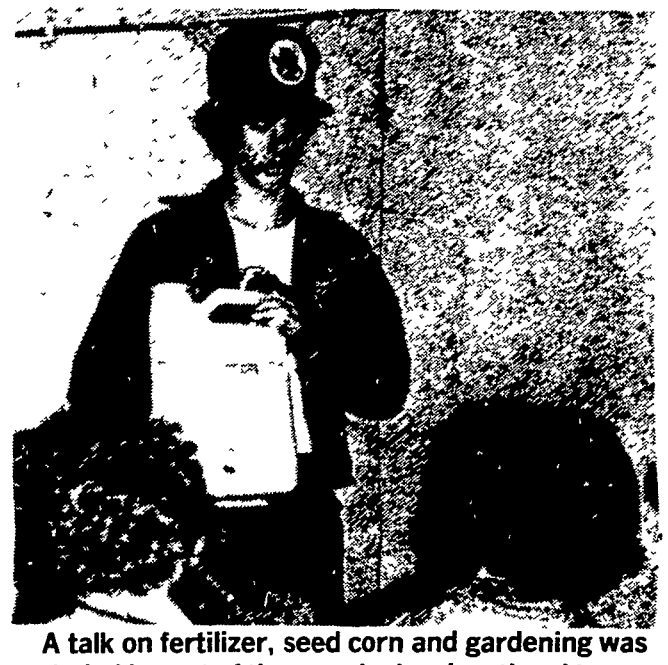
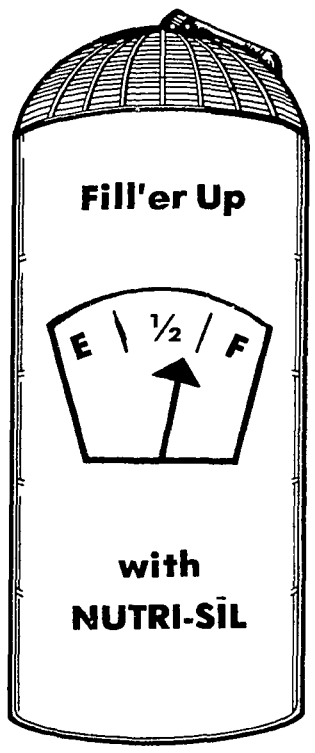
Tawnya Harman's horse Micky was a highlight of the morning for the youngsters. Here Patrice McFarland shows the kids the horse's teeth. The youngsters were impressed with the gunk on the teeth. Patrice commented that theirs would look like that if they did not brush them, to which one young man chirped, "My dad's look just like that."



A talk on fertilizer, seed corn and gardening was included in part of the morning's educational tour.



NUTRI-SIL
Brand
Silage Inoculant
"THE ENERGY SAVER"

During fermentation the carbohydrates in the forage should be converted to lactic acid, the pH should drop to 4.0 or below and the resulting silage should retain its protein, digestibility and most of its energy. On a pound per pound of dry matter basis, the energy content of silage should be higher than that of the crop ensiled. In other words, the dry matter loss should exceed the energy loss. This can only happen when we produce enough lactic acid to preserve the silage within 4 or 5 days after ensiling. The key to losses in the silo is the type and extent of fermentation which takes place with the material ensiled. By inoculating forage with the right strains of desirable bacteria - as are in the FERTRELL NUTRI-SIL - you can control and direct the fermentation process in order to produce high quality silage and reduce dry matter losses.

The rapid action of these lactic acid bacteria can ensilate or retain much of the energy, nutrients, and moisture usually lost in silage. The "ensilating" effect of the right bacteria and ensiling techniques very often determine the quality of the finished silage product and how it performs in your animals.

PROFITS and FEED VALUE add up

Fall mums need care now

LITITZ — For a colorful display of chrysanthemums in your garden this fall, you may divide or take cuttings from established clumps now, advises James McKeehen, Delaware County Extension Agent.

Chrysanthemums quickly become crowded unless replanted about every two years. Use a spade, trowel, or old knife, to separate the small plants on the outside of last year's chrysanthemum clumps Replant these young plants and discard the old ones. Also, you make take cuttings about 6-8 inches long from the new shoots which are growing from last year's plants. Dip them in a hormone powder and root them in moist, coarse sand, perlite or vermiculite, in a flower pot or cold-frame. The proper temperature for rooting cuttings should be about 65° F. Keep the cuttings away from direct sunlight. Rootings will take two to three weeks, after which you can plant the cuttings in the garden.

Let your mums grow 6 to 8 inches high, then pinch the top one inch of growth off each shoot. This will cause side branches to develop. When each of the side branches has developed 6 inches of new growth, pinch the tips from these shoots, too. The final pinch should be made about June 15 for early varieties and July 15 for late varieties to allow sufficient time for buds to develop.

Spring housecleaning should be routine

YORK — With more two-earner and single parent families and busier schedules for all, the house often suffers.

This spring take a hard look at your housecleaning habits says York home economist, Marcy Seckman.

Make simple clean-up automatic. Remember the old saying about an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure. Swish a wet soapy washcloth around the tub after each bath to prevent a ring from forming. Rinse or soak dishes to be handwashed—even if you can't get to them right away. If you have a dishwasher, pop the dirty dishes right in—no need to rinse.

Get the whole family into the act. Make it easy for children to help by installing easy to reach clothes poles and open-front storage boxes in their rooms. Locate protective mats and rugs at entry ways and other heavy traffic areas to catch dirty shoes before they track across the floor. Have coasters in easy reach on coffee or end tables.

Review daily, weekly and regularly chores so you know how much time each job takes. Then plan ahead to avoid unnecessary interruptions. To save steps (and time) when you clean, carry a tote basket stocked with frequently used supplies.

Germany: land of 18-inch cucumbers

BY CURT HARLER

BERLIN, WEST GERMANY — Cucumbers explain a number of the differences an American visitor notices upon arrival in Germany.

The milk's not the same as at home, and the whole agricultural system is a bit unique.

But the people are uniformly wonderful and quite patient with an American whose German accent is more Spanish sounding than German.

The cucumbers in Germany, and throughout northern Europe, tend to be giants by U.S. standards. They run 16 to 18 inches long, some pushing two feet.

Those cucumbers are uniformly skinny, certainly no more than two or three inches in diameter.

Compare that to the typical American pickle and you'll soon see why a visitor may suspect the vegetable merchants are selling green spaghetti.

The cucumbers are practical since every slice is nearly uniform in size. And the smaller size is convenient for salads

The cucumbers we grow are every bit as tasty as theirs. In a salad it would be impossible to tell the difference.

Cucumbers are like many things in German life: smaller, more compact, and quite practical.

Milk for the supermarket is packaged in one liter cartons—about the volume in a U.S. quart. But again the packaging is quite different.

The German milk bottle looks more like a cake mix box than the traditional pointed-top milk carton the American shopper is used to looking for.

Getting the milk carton open is a challenge It requires a pair of scissors and a steady hand to assure none of the liquid is sloshed out.

Inside, too, there are some differences.

It's not the taste which is unique . . . after all, many of our best cows are of German ancestry.

Our German friends asssured us they could leave their milk cartons on the table for as long as three days at room temperature without danger of the milk spoiling.

In the U.S., the University of Maryland has had some preliminary publicity on a process which is supposed to keep milk from spoiling at room temperature.

But the Germans seem to have it today. We had several different conversations on the subject and the Germans assured that the process was not the typical homoginized nor pasturized product U.S. stores sell.

The process allows milk to stay on the table without turning bad. It's a big help for forgetful homemakers; saves space in the tiny European sized refrigerators; and, since milk on the table is easy to grab, makes milk more available to children looking for a quick drink.

Germans are only just discovering sweet corn as a vegetable.

Until recently, corn was for cattle and hogs and no self-respecting German homemaker would put such a dish before the family.

Today, Germans say, it is more common for corn to be served as a vegetable along with a whole host of other vegetables Americans would consider common.

Germans are a great nation of gardeners. Even in the large cities like Berlin, vast tracts are given over to personal gardens. Called Schreiber gardens, after the man who proposed them, they are a status symbol for the upper-middle class Berliner.

Schreiber, writing in the early 1900s, said it is important for city dwellers to have close contact with the soil. To that end, he proposed a system whereby any urbanite could have a garden of his own.

The Schreiber gardens are tiny plots, no more than 25 yards square on the average, each with a small one or two room house. The Germans come out to their summer home on weekends, grow dwarf fruit trees, garden vegetables, and flowers.

It keeps the city in touch with agriculture and provides a healthy recreation.

One of the growing conflicts in Berlin is over the loss of the garden areas to development. The Berliners like their plots, and even though they inevitably will lose them, they cherish the impact the little plots have on their lives.

Agriculture, too, in the Federal Republic (West Germany) has undergone changes similar to those we are seeing in the United States.

As here, a great many German farmers have left the land to work in the cities.

The German government statistics show that 20 out of 100 Germans worked in farming in 1950. Today the number is 7 in 100.

Over the same period the number of farms with more than a hectare of agricultural area fell from 1.6 million to 880,000 operations.

Small holdings still are the rule in Germany. Their owners try to offset the disadvantages of small scale operations by cooperating. More than three-fourths of all German farms are linked together in co-ops, the Government says.

Despite the small size of the farms, there is a great deal of modern mechanization. Particularly the specialized operations like poultry, cattle or hogs, are more like mechanized industrial plants than the farms of old.

The German Agriculture Ministry lists the nation's main crops as flour and feed grains, potatoes, sugar beets, vegetables, fruit, and wine.

Horses are popular. In a city as squeezed for space as West Berlin is, there still is room for a couple of horse farms. And there are about 200,000 horses within the city limits.

The German consumer has the advantage of relatively cheap products thanks to the government subsidies.

The American dairyman may realize the impact of such subsidies even more than the German consumer, for it is the American who is competing against the subsidized product.

As a member of the European Economic Community, Germany cooperates in EEC trade regulations.

Since the EEC generally sets international ag policy the main field left to national ag policy is rural social welfare

This alone accounts for half of the Federal German expenditure in national agricultural policy, the government says.

Germans see three kinds of farmers: those who want to consolidate their holdings to stay in farming, those who want to get out of farming, and those who feel they can't get out of farming since they have no alternative employment.

Most of the German government programs are for the first group. They help with investment promotion through cheap loans, advancement aids and promotion of farmer cooperatives.

The second group receives social support for switching. The third group can look for transitional aids as they leave farming.

Since those leaving agriculture need new jobs, the government has programs to encourage industry to locate in rural areas.

The German farmer is just as conservative as the American, and the two share many common concerns. But the German farmer, and European farmers in general, seem to count more on government assistance rather than government interference

There are similar problems. While little deer damage was noted, the northern European grain fields seemed totally infested with rabbits.

No ordinary rabbits, these. Each was the size of a small dog and must have weighed 20 pounds.

Lest the rabbits' size be thought exaggeration, it should be noted they were plainly visible 100 yards away from a speeding train at many points in both Germany and Denmark.

The critters take their toll on production, the same as deer do here in Pennsylvania.

And so, a visitor is left with the impression that things are pretty much the same all over even though there are differences.

The Germans, including our host on the Friendship Force exchange Sebastian Kilian, were fine, understanding, informative, and tolerant people.

Germany remains a nation where most Pennsylvanians could feel at home. The landscape is the same, the climate is similar, the people are warm and open.

Farmers slate D.C. bus-in to lobby against mushroom imports

NOTTINGHAM — The Pennsylvania Farmers Union will send a delegation of mushroom growers to Washington in an effort to reduce the impact of imported mushrooms on farm income in Pennsylvania according to Richard King of Nottingham, Chester County.

King, a mushroom farmer, is chairman of the "bus-in" which will take place June 3rd through June 5th.

Noting that Pennsylvania is the foremost mushroom-producing state in the nation, King said mushroom growers from Chester, Berks and Lancaster counties would leave the Oxford Shopping Mall at six p.m. Tuesday, June 3rd by bus for Washington where the delegation will "make every effort to convince our congressmen that the influx of foreign mushroom is dangerously close to causing economic disaster for Pennsylvania's mushroom growers and processors."

John Kimble, President of the Chester County Farmers Union, urged all area mushroom growers and processors to join the delegation to "point up the fact that we just can't fight the double attack of imports and the inroads being made on the Pennsylvania mushroom industry by huge corporations from other states."

Kimble said mushrooms from Taiwan and Korea now account for over fifty percent of the market in the United States and added that in the recent past, nine of Pennsylvania's sixteen mushroom processors have gone out of business because of their inability to "compete with cheap imports."

Kimble cited USDA's AID program which "encouraged Taiwan to get into the U.S. mushroom market in an important way" as another topic for discussion between the Pennsylvania congressional delegation and the farm group.

Kimble said anyone interested in participating in the bus-in should call him at 215/932-9051.

USDA to review several grain standards

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Public comments have been requested by the U.S. Department of Agriculture on the adequacy of existing U.S. grain standards for corn, soybeans and mixed grain.

Leland E. Bartelt, administrator of USDA's Federal Grain Inspection Service, said the comments are being requested as part of a periodic review of all existing regulations.

"We evaluate the existing standards regularly to determine whether they are still relevant to the needs of the industry, and to determine whether more objective methods of evaluating grain quality may be incorporated into the standards," he said.

Bartelt said research and other current information suggest that some grading factors offer little information about certain end-use properties, and thus have limited value in determining grain quality and facilitating the marketing of grain.

Factors in question, include the usefulness of assigning a grade on the basis of moisture, broken corn and foreign material, and test weight in corn and foreign materials in soybeans. However, FGIS solicits comments from interested parties on any grading factor for corn, soybeans, and mixed grain.

It is the intent of FGIS, in keeping with recommendations by Congress and an industry advisory committee, to propose revision of standards of more accurately reflect end-use properties using objective means, whenever possible, Bartelt said.

The request for comments was published in the May 8 Federal Register.

Written comments may be submitted by July 7 to the issuance and coordination staff, room 1127 Auditors bldg., USDA, Washington, D.C., 20250. All comments will be available for public inspection.

Lancaster County Pomona 71 adopts resolutions

Lancaster County Pomona 71 met April 26, at White Horse Fire Hall with the Salisbury Grange as host. Overseer LeRoy Welk conducted an open meeting.

Two resolutions were passed. One urged a continuance of Saturday mail delivery. The other urged setting up legislation that would permit smaller municipalities to form waste disposal groups to process methanol. Copies of these resolutions were sent to state and national representatives.

Legislative chairman, Jesse Wood, reported on House Bill 2360 on control of noxious weeds, especially Johnson Grass and Multi Flora Rose. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Holloway, Jr. were elected delegates to Pennsylvania University Trustee Election.

Everyone was reminded of the Buy a Brick fund. And were invited to Fulton Grange on Monday, June 9 for the annual strawberry and ice cream night. August 23rd is the picnic meeting at Huffnagle Park.

Letters are being sent to PennDot and the Chester-Delaware Pomona in the hopes of getting some action on the Route 272 Kirks Bridge.

Doctor Thomas Regan talked on the prevention of tooth disease. He said basically these diseases are social in nature, due to the increased refined sugar consumption.

Berks and Bucks hold sheep shearing school

LEESPORT — Area shepherds had an opportunity to learn the art of shearing their own sheep last week as Berks and Bucks County Extension Services sponsored a sheep shearing school, here at Berks County Farm Number One, next to the County Ag Center.

Instructing the two evening affair was Bucks County Extension Agent Mike Fournier. Fournier taught the Sunbeam or Australian method where the shearer uses his or her legs to hold the sheep during the shearing process.

He emphasized the importance of correct feet and leg placement in correlation to the sheep's body. The hands are kept free for shearing and keeping the skin of the animal taunt, making it less likely to nick the sheep with the shears.

Fournier also noted the importance of keeping the front legs of the sheep off the ground, preventing the animal from struggling to get free. Starting on the belly of the animal, the shearing progressed to the hind legs, up over the rump and top of tail.

The instructor explained the importance of using long strokes to preserve the value of the fleece, giving a full length to the fibers. Next, he sheared the head and under the neck of the sheep and worked around to the front legs and across the back, removing the fleece in one piece. LS

Penn Manor FFA takes Foods for America program to elementarys

Many youngsters refused to touch the pigs. This young man approaches the swine timidly. Others were bold enough to pick the piglets up by the back feet to hear them squeal. And one young man needed an answer to the question, "Do they speak pig latin."

While the cows received gentle pats, this calf received hugs and oohs from the children as they rubbed their hands over its soft hair.

The pony received a lion's share of the attention from the second and third graders at Eshelman. After their encounter with the animals, the children each received a coloring book from the FFA.

Questions like-How does the cow make milk? and How does it get to the store? and Will she eat grass? were adeptly fielded by the FFA members.

Penn Manor FFA

With their strange looks and their strange calls, the turkeys intimidated some youngsters and amused others.

The objective during the afternoon was to provide the youngsters with a hands-on approach to agriculture. This cow had many hands on her during the afternoon. The FFA conducted the program for youngsters at both Eshelman and Creswell Schools.

Children were encouraged to feel the wool. Doesn't that feel just like a blanket? they were asked. Prior to the petting zoo, the children saw a film about food production.

This steer stood tamely in the shade of a small tree while youngsters received answers to such questions as-"Does this cow give milk", and after the answer, to the question, "You mean he's full of hamburger in there."

Chemical dispenser for balers

WILLOW STREET — A new universal chemical dispenser for fermentation control designed to work on all equipment including new round balers has been introduced by Mellinger Manufacturing Co.

The patented device can be installed on round balers, square balers, shellers, blowers, augers, grinders, silo cutters, mixers and all line feeding equipment.

The first commercially available dispenser that offers harvest fermentation control with new round balers also is the only dispenser that features an automatic shut-off.

According to the manufacturer, the new dispenser uses a micro-switch or a star drive mechanism, depending on the model, to insure that all flow of chemicals stops when the flow of feed is halted in any machine, eliminating expensive chemical waste.

Available with three different adaptor kits, the new dispenser can be moved from one piece of equipment to another for complete flexibility.

A free catalog is available from Mellinger Manufacturing Company, R.D.2, Willow Street, PA 17584.

Offers computer feeding system

FORT ATKINSON, Wisc — A micro-computer-based electronic feeding control center with solid-state circuitry for use with its new Convey-N-Feed end-load cattle feeder in multi-lot feeding systems is announced by the Jamewsay Division of Butler Manufacturing Company, Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin

The control center simplifies, automates, and controls total mixed ration feeding in multi-lot beef and dairy installations

In the digital readout rectangle at the top of the panel, the changing number indicate (in feet) how far down the bunk cattle are being fed

Automatic feeding starts when the operator touches the pressure-sensitive pad of the number of the lot he wishes to feed, one through six. The control center can handle up to 12 feedlots

Lights in the diverter diagram at the right center indicate which side of the bunk is being fed and in which direction the diverter (which guides feed off the concave belt into the feed bunk below) is moving

The three bottom-left touch-sensitive pads permit independent operation of the Convey-N-Feed cattle feeder belt and two auxiliary conveyors, for example.

Changing the length of the bunk to be fed is easily accomplished at the control panel, without going out into the feedlot to rewire limit switches.

Maximum farm facility loan doubled by ASCS

WASHINGTON, D.C — Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland Tuesday announced that the amount a farmer may borrow under the farm storage facility loan program has been increased from $50,000 to $100,000. The loan increase is being authorized to reflect higher costs of construction and materials, Bergland said.

Under this program, loans are offered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to help farmers buy, build or remodel on-farm storage facilities and to obtain needed drying and handling equipment.

The maximum loan is 85 percent of the cost of the structures and equipment. Under the new maximum, the aggregate outstanding loan balance maximum is also increased to $100,000, Bergland said

A minimum down payment of 15 percent of the cost must be paid in cash by the farmer before the loan is disbursed.

Loan repayment terms allow for a maximum of seven equal annual installments over a period of eight years. Prepayment may be made at any time without penalty.

Farmers must apply for loans at their county ASCS office within 30 days of the time the items to be financed are delivered to the farm. The higher loan amounts are available on applications filed beginning today.

No change is being made in the current method of determining storage needs or in the loan levels requiring Agricultural Stabilization state committee approval or real estate liens.

Farmers have built approximately 4.2 billion bushels of storage under the farm storage facility loan program since the program began in 1949. About 43 percent of this construction has occurred since April 1977 when Bergland authorized major program changes

NPPC approves 20 cent checkoff

DES MOINES, Ia. — Delegates to the 1980 American Pork Congress have given their approval to an increase in checkoff funding raising the present 10 cents per market hog to 20 cents per market hog as of January 1, 1981, reports the National Pork Producer's Council.

The action came at the end of a delegate session marked by six hours of debate, a knowledge of Robert's Rules of Order and considerable caucusing whenever the opportunity presented itself.

The 20 cent checkoff funding will be distributed with approximately 60 percent of the increase to the National Pork Producers Council with NPPC-member states and the National Livestock and Meat Board each receiving approximately 20 per cent of the funding. Funding for the Meat Board carries with it the stipulation that the Board undertake a study paving the way for pork producer representatives on the Board to be elected by NPPC delegates.

The five cent per head feeder pig checkoff rate remains unchanged.

The increased funding plan should, according to NPPC's Orville Sweet, executive vice president, nearly double funding available for carrying out important Council programs. Budget for the past year was $2.2 million.

Ness Suffolks top York sheep day

BAIR — Last Saturday was a memorable day for the York County Sheep and Wool Producers and 4-H shepherd Troy Ness of Dallastown R1.

Over 300 Pennsylvania and Maryland sheep enthusiasts turned out for the group's first field day, held at the 4-H Center. Highlight of the day was the afternoon breeding stock sale, with Ness's registered Suffolk consignments topping all three divisions of the auction.

Topping the market lamb division was Ness' entry, which went for $130 to James Moxley, Jr., of West Friendship, Maryland. Average for the total 37 head in the market animal division was $66.06.

There were nineteen registered ewes in that category of the breeding stock sale, bringing an average of $147.40. Purchaser of the top selling Ness Suffolk female was George Urbanchuk of Harleysville, with a final bid of $380.

Lynn Laudenslager of Dalmatia bought the high seller of the dozen breeding rams. He paid $250 for the Suffolk, while the sale averaged $96.25.

"We were very pleased with the way the day went," said George Dutrey, secretary of the county sheep breeders group. "And we'll probably be making it an annual event."

A major goal of the field day was to broaden membership and interest in the organization. A total of 31 new families signed up for membership during Saturday's activities. The morning program featured sheep dog and lamb carcass cutting demonstrations and a Penn State specialist on sheep management.

Also on hand throughout the day were a variety of wool-related craft demonstration and sheep supply exhibit booths and wool fleeces for sale to home spinners.

York County flock owners interested in joining the sheep and wool producers organization are invited to send their $3 yearly membership to: George Dutrey, R2, Box A202, Dallastown, PA 17301. - JB

USDA raises limits for bovine TB payments

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Department of Livestock officials have raised the limits for indemnities paid to livestock owners whose cattle must be destroyed because of tuberculosis. Also, for the first time, indemnities will be allowed for swine exposed to tuberculosis-infected cattle when the cattle herd is destroyed.

Pierre A. Chaloux, deputy administrator for USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said higher indemnity levels will provide more equitable compensation to owners whose animals must be destroyed because of exposure to tuberculosis-affected cattle.

Chaloux said USDA will increase the maximum federal indemnity for tuberculosis-affected cattle from $350 per head to $750.

Indemnity limits for tuberculosis-exposed cattle will be $450 per head. The indemnity was $100 per head for nonregistered cattle and $200 per head for registered animals.

When swine are destroyed because of exposure to cattle infected with bovine tuberculosis, owners may be compensated up to $200 per head. Previously there was no federal indemnity.

These payments, together with any state indemnities, may not exceed the appraise value of animals destroyed, and will make allowances for the salvage value of animals slaughtered.

The new indemnity levels were recommended by the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture as a means for protecting the public through a more effective tuberculosis eradication program.

Nine shepherds certified in management skills

SOUDERTON — Nine part-time shepherds from the Montgomery County area received certificates of accomplishment upon successful participation in a sheep clinic sponsored by the Montgomery County Cooperative Extension Service in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Cooperative Extension Service and the Department of Agricultural Education at Penn State held recently at the farm of Warren Landis in Souderton.

The sheep clinic was conducted as part of a statewide effort to expand sheep production in Pennsylvania. Basic technical sheep management skills were taught by Nancy Kadwill, County Agent of Collegeville and Warren Landis, President of Bucks-Mont Wool Pool.

The skills taught included catching, handling and throwing sheep, castrating and docking lambs, how to give an intramuscular injection, hoof trimming; taking temperatures; worming with a dose syringe; how to make an "instant" halter out of baling twine; and determining the age of a sheep by its teeth.

These sheep management skills were taught to enable shepherds to be competent in performing approved sheep management practices.

Kadwill and Landis explained and demonstrated each skill followed by a laboratory session allowing each participant to practice the technical skills Under the watchful eye of the instructors, all participants had the opportunity to become competent in performing each skill.

To qualify to receive the certificate of accomplishment, individuals had to earn a score of 85 or higher by performing their newly learned skills before an evaluator from Penn State.

Those receiving the certificate of accomplishment were Terry Newman, Harleysville; Leroy and Alta Poore of Ottsville; Marilyn and Ralph Mase of Telford; John Grocki of Pottstown and Gretchen Stryelecki of Pennsburg.

YOUNGWOOD — Royal Charolais Company beat the breeds record for bull sales last Saturday at their 10th Anniversary Sale, according to Buzz Garey, of Garey Cattle Sales, Morrisville.

The 24 bull lots sold at the Westmoreland County farm brought a total of $98,900 for an average price of $3996 to set the new record for the Charolais breed.

The highest price paid for three-quarter interest in one of the Royal bulls brought $24,000 from buyers out of two states.

Barton Charolais Ranches, of Abbeyville, South Carolina, and Kenwood Farms, of Seagrove, North Carolina, went together for full possession and three-quarter interest in RCC Royal Standout 2973.

Celebrating his birthday the day of the sale, this May 17, 1979 polled bull was sired by RCC Standout, out of a Sir Sam daughter. His adjusted weaning weight was 713 pounds.

Royal Charolais reserved the show rights on this $24 grand bull.

Kenneth Boozel, McVeytown, bought the high-priced heifer at this year's Royal sale. RCC Royal Temptress 2815, a polled daughter of HCR Expectation 269 (polled), out of RCC Royal Countess 34 (polled), sold for $4100.

The March 13, 1979 heifer's adjusted weaning weight was 633 pounds. She was one of six heifers sold at the sale out of the Expectation bull.

One of the Expectation daughters will be traveling to Lancaster County, to the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Heistand. They purchased RCC Royal Temptress 2884, a half sister to the top-priced female, born April 4, 1979. Her adjusted weaning weight was 617 pounds.

Mrs. Heistand explained that the heifer's sire was the 1979 National Grand Champion Bull, and her mother, Bell Perfection 59, is polled. She added that they are hoping to show the heifer at the Timonium show in Maryland and later at the Keystone show.

There were 32 lots of females sold at the Royal sale for $75,400, averaging $2353.

Bulls and females combined, the May 17 sale totaled $174,300 for the 56 lots, for a Royal record high average of $3071.

Despite the rain that attempted to dampen the day, breeders from 20 states and 2 provinces in Canada attended the sale, coming from as far West as Nebraska, Oklahoma and Kansas, as far South as Mississippi, and as far North as Ontario.—SM

N.Y. April milk price set at $11.96

NEW YORK, NY — Dairy farmers supplying milk plants regulated under the New York - New Jersey marketing orders during April will be paid on the basis of a uniform price of $11.96 per hundred pounds or 25.7 cents per quart.

Market Administrator Thomas A. Wilson, who announced April's price, also stated that the uniform farm price was $12.06 per hundredweight in March 1980 and $10.95 per hundredweight in April 1979. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

The seasonal incentive fund removed $.30 per hundredweight from the dairy farmers' uniform price for April, for a total of $2,791,029.45. Deductions for this fund will condinue through June and will be returned in the August through November uniform price calculations.

The total amount of milk received from the 17,591 dairy farmers supplying the New York - New Jersey marketing Area was 930,343,150 pounds during April 1980. This was more than 32.6 million pounds above last year.

The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $113,387,578.00. Wilson explained that this included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers utilized 377,832,389 pounds or 40.6 percent of the total amount of milk for Class I.

The Class I milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low-test and skim milks.

For April 1980, handlers paid $13.60 per hundredweight, or 29.2 cents per quart, for this milk compared with $12.77 a year ago.

The balance of the milk, 59.4 percent, was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream and yogurt. For this milk the handlers paid $11.59 per hundredweight.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For April 1980, a differential of 15.4 cents was applied to the price for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

Adams County fruit growers review spring orchard situation

ORRTANNA — Winter injury to peach trees, arrival of the gypsy moth, orchard inspection of fruit during harvest and pesticide re-certification were topics discussed at the second spring meeting of the Adams County Fruitgrowers Association held last Wednesday, at the orchard of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Woerner, R1, Orrtanna.

Meeting at 6:30 p.m., the growers were taken on tour of the Woerner orchard to see the 75 acres of apples, 25 acres of peaches and smaller plantings of cherries, pears, plums and raspberries. A tour was also made of the neighboring Rebert farm of El Vista Orchards where the growers saw 120 acres of mainly semi-dwarf apples on MM104, MM106, MM111 and EM7A rootstocks.

In his final appearance before taking out-of-state employment, Donald Petersen, extension plant pathologist from Penn State cited the pro-longed growing season in 1979 and the lack of winter snow cover as primary causes of death to peach trees planted in 1977 and 1978.

Wind-whipping and wet soil conditions may be associated with the problem which manifests itself by dead trunk tissue beginning 2 inches below soil line down to where the roots branch.

Reporting on apple scab, Petersen estimated that 25 to 50 percent of primary spores remain to be discharged at the next wetting period.

"Because insecticides are not applied in the orchard during bloom, the petal-fall spray becomes one of the most important sprays of the season on fruit trees" said Larry Hull, entomologist from the Penn State Fruit Research Laboratory, Biglerville.

He reported that Rosy Apple Aphids had been held in check by early sprays and good coverage.

Populations of white apple leafhopper, green fruit worm, green peach aphid and male adults of San Jose scale merit control measures now. Hull revealed that gypsy moth larvae are present in many Adams County orchards. Left uncontrolled, they are heavy feeders on apple leaves.

Warning that the growers' best efforts to produce top quality fruit can be destroyed in a moment by careless picking which bruises the fruit, Ed Stoner, Supervisor of Shipping Point Inspection, Federal-State Inspection Service, Chambersburg, invited growers to consider hiring Federal-State inspectors for orchard supervision during harvest.

Details provided by calling Stoner at 717/263-2715.

"Proper disposal of pesticide containers means delivering 'triple-rinsed' and rendered useless' pesticide containers to the Adams County Sanitary Landfill in Tyrone Township near Aspers", said Donald Lott, Pesticide Inspector for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

This is the only DER-approved disposal site in Adams County and Lott warned that the Department of Environmental Resources will fine farmers who use sink holes and other unapproved sites for disposal of empty containers.

Lott reviewed the procedure for renewing pesticide applicator permits and signed certificates of training for some growers at the meeting.

"Motel reservations are due May 23 and tour reservations by June 9 for those who will participate in the Summer Horticulture Tour to Bedford, Blair and Centre Counties" said Thomas E. Piper, County Agent. Piper surveyed the group for interest in bus transportation and concluded that lack of interest ruled this out.

George Peters, President of the fruitgrowers, presided at the meeting. He thanked the growers for supporting a very successful Apple Blossom Festival, asked for support of the Apple Queen USA program and announced the next grower meeting for Wednesday, June 11, 1980, 6:30 p.m. at Worley's Nurseries, York Springs.

Refreshments at the meeting were provided by D and S Orchard Supply Co., R2, Biglerville.

MAKE HAY WHILE THE GREEN SHINES

Bale it earlier with our natural preservative for less than $1 00 per ton of hay or silage. Friendly bacteria move through the green hay - it doesn't have to be dispensed uniformly - each layer in mow will do. But we sell Mellinger bale applicators for $110 if wanted.

Wouldn't you pay much more for good green hay than "rained on" hay? Therefore bale it before the rain - before it would otherwise be fit

SOFT ROCK PHOSPHATE

Only $80 per ton bulk, plus spreading
$90 in bags and there is no filler All plant food

- Excellent for pastures and hay fields and anything that grows
- Non-toxic, even on pastures to cows It is a feeding grade
- Rich in phosphorus, calcium, other minerals and trace elements, including the desperately needed valuable selenium
- It puts its minerals and trace elements in the feed It is better to raise a healthy crop than trying to balance a sick one by men's judgement That is why some feed programs do good for some dairymen but utterly fail for another Nature knows best
- It makes a strong huge root system and strong, wind resistant stalks
- One application lasts for years Doesn't dissipate or leach Saves tracking fields every year
- It puts plenty sugar in crops which is protein and energy in feed and flavor in vegetables Deer devour the corn but bypass the neighbors Mountain farmers, beware!
- It is the answer especially for livestock farmers Manure and cover crops are high in potash but low in phosphorus Dr Carey Reams gets his 100 bu soybeans, 250 bu corn, 5 ft alfalfa with high phosphorus and lower potash, using soft rock phosphate We try to follow the leader Because you don't need potash every year, and get your nitrogen out of the air with our BX nitrogen fixing bacteria, you don't need a blend which would cost twice the price because of the extra handling
- Excellent mixed with manure because it { retains ammonia / buffers the acid / strengthens bacteria in manure and bacteria in manure makes phosphate available faster Start now to throw it in cow gutters and livestock and poultry pens Do you want a high priced fertilizer and ordinary crops or extra large and extremely nutritious crops with good standibility, with half priced fertilizer? The squeezed farmer must make wise decisions

Apply on low pastures while the ground is dry and solid We also have excellent Fertrell fish and seakelp based liquid fertilizer for transplanting and foliar feeding Makes healthy crops which resist bugs and disease Same is also true for soft rock phosphate

Close Call

I'm sure not everyone would agree but another indication of the milk supply and marketing situation was the close call that Pennsylvania producers shipping milk to Farmland Dairies had last month.

Clearly, Farmland was more than a little upset by the fines they were paying for overloaded trucks hauling milk to New York and threatened to drop all their Pennsylvania producers because the gross weight limit in our state was 6,720 pounds less than New York or New Jersey.

On the surface it would appear to be a new and unusual reason for a handler to drop producers But more than that, it was a demonstration against the higher hauling costs compounded by severe losses in the payment of fines without any opportunity to cover them in the market because of burdensome supplies.

On top of everything else the U.S. Department of Transportation was leaning on all the states to do a better job of traffic law enforcement using the federal subsidies for highway maintenance as a persuader

So here we were with a gross weight limit lower than the states around us, with milk production increasing daily, handlers trying to assemble the supply at the lowest possible cost, and the feds threatening to take away money needed for road repairs It was a good time for producers to think about the costs and problems that handlers and co-ops have in milk supply assembly

As of now, Farmland has not taken any action against its producers but only because Pennsylvania legislators from the northeastern counties and farm organizations, particularly Pennsylvania Farmers Association, have promised action in Harrisburg to move legislation raising the gross weight limit to 80,000 pounds.

How long this will take, or how long farmland will delay its action, is uncertain But all dairymen are urged to solicit their state representatives for support for quick passage of the legislation needed, not just for Farmland or for milk haulers, but for the entire trucking industry in the state

It isn't clear what Farmland will do at the end of the 28 day notice it must give producers if they are dropped because nearly half of its milk supply comes from Pennsylvania from over 300 farmers I'll have to admit that the threat of such action has certainly dramatized the situation more effectively among farmers than anything else I could imagine

Dairymen can grind hay to replace cereal grains

UNIVERSITY PARK — Scientists at Penn State have come to the aid of dairy farmers paying inflated prices for cereal grains and oilmeal protein supplements needed to keep their herds producing high milk yields

The scientists found they could use high quality alfalfa-grass hay, after it was run through a grinder, to replace up to 33 per cent of the more costly cereal grains and oilmeal normally fed to dairy cows

This use of high quality hay to partially replace what dairymen call feed concentrates could be quite beneficial to dairy farmers if feed prices continue upward, says Earl M Kesler, professor of dairy science at University Park

He indicated the Penn State experiments are among the first in the U S to evaluate alfalfa as a replacement for grain and oilmeal concentrates in the diets of high producing cows

Normal levels of milk fat and protein were maintained with the feeding of some long hay Cow health was unchanged The ground hay replacement for grain and oilmeal was fed to Holstein cows during the first six months of a 10 month milking cycle

The findings were reported in the Spring issue of "Science in Agriculture," the quarterly magazine of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State The studies were carried out by Edward DePeters, former graduate assistant from Albion, NY, and now with the faculty at the University of California at Davis, and Kesler

The experiment used 30 Holstein cows assigned at random to three groups of 10 each, based on previous milk production One group was fed the full concentrate ration

A second group was fed a 20 per cent ground alfalfa-grass mixture

The third group received a ration containing 33 per cent alfalfa-grass in place of the grain and oilmeal The forage component of the diet included long alfalfa hay and corn silage

There was a trend for dry matter intake of feed to increase and milk and protein yield to decrease as the amount of ground alfalfa hay increased Milk yields peaked in the fifth week of lactation for cows in all three feeding groups

DePeters noted that costs of grain and oilmeal were reduced where high quality ground hay was used He said the average estimated cost for each ton of grain and oilmeal was $133 where 33 per cent ground hay was substituted, $137 with 20 per cent ground hay, and $140 where no ground hay was fed.

DePeters said dollar return favored not using the ground hay substitute when all rations were bought at market prices current at the time of the study. However, this relationship could change, he pointed out, if the hay portion were farm grown or if prices of oilmeals and cereal grains increase appreciably

To be successful with this feed, the hay must be excellent in quality, Dr. Kesler emphasized. Once included in the grain mixture, the ground alfalfa-grass hay was considered part of the grain concentrate and not as forage.

Cumberland co-op sells fleeces

CARLISLE — The Cumberland Co-op Sheep and Wool Growers announced the sale of the 1980 Wool Pool to A H. Helmig & Co. Inc , Boston, Mass.

The following are the prices per pound growers will receive from the pool for each grade. A charge will be deducted from each pooler's total pounds of wool for dues and expenses of the pool operations.

3/8 and 1/4 Staple 85 cents: 3/8 and ¼ Clothing 80 cents; Medium Rejects 80 cents; Low 1/4 82 cents; Fine 82 cents; Fine Rejects 78 cents; Tags 35 cents.

Marlin Rook, president of the co-op reminds all poolers that all fleeces must be tied. Loose fleeces and fleeces tied with binder twine or other string will be sold as rejects, he added.

"Wool must be free of excessive moisture. If wet, dry them in the sun. Store in a dry place — not in the cellar or on concrete. Please do not bring wool to the pool in plastic woven bags. Fleeces that are brought to the pool in plastic woven bags will be severely discounted,"Rook explained.

The pool will be held only one day, Wednesday, June 18, from 7 a.m. - 3 p.m. It will be held at the Carlisle Fairgrounds, located along Route 34 in Carlisle.

Producers from nearby counties are welcome, said Rook.

Wool will be graded and weighed in the pooler's presence, and he will get a receipt showing pounds of each grade. Checks for wool will be received within a couple of weeks after the pool.

Penn State specialists will conduct wool grading demonstration as part of the day's activities.

Grain firm official worries over lost U.S. prestige

PALM BEACH, Fla., The U.S. grain marketing system, historically the world's most accurate price barometer, may have lost some of its prestige in the recent grain embargo, an export official said today.

Myron R. Laserson, senior vice president-merchandising, World Grain Division, Continental Grain Company, claimed that the U.S. system cannot in the future be as precise an indicator of world supply and demand as before.

"International prices tend to follow free markets," he explained.

According to Laserson, various governments around the world may "question our ability to honor our commitments". And, he added, "...this could increase their determination to be self-sufficient in food - or do without."

Working on behalf of U.S. producers, he continued, grain exporters have been driven to seek out new markets while being denied serious access to the world's largest, most important grain importer.

"The Russians got most of the grain they needed this year," Laserson pointed out, "and no doubt will make sure in the future that they never again are so complacent as to rely on the U.S. as a dependable supplier."

Paradoxically, he predicted, the embargo could benefit some farmers .particularly the soft wheat producers.

Laserson expects the U S to produce more soft wheat than in many years, but with good demand for it.

"Our projection of U.S. soft red and white wheat exports is 385 million bushels, or 60 percent of the crop."

He reasons that "we have to expect that no matter how large the Russian wheat crop this summer...they will want to build up their reserves"

On the assumption that the USSR would be limited to three million tons from the U.S , Laserson expects that nation to maximize purchases from Argentina, while cutting exports to Eastern Europe.

Given the logistical limitations of Canada and Australia, Laserson said this leaves "the United States with presumably an open door to the price sensitive buyers of Eastern Europe."

He looks to eastern Europe. especially Poland, Yugoslavia and Rumania as a major market for wheat "Even though their crop prospects for next year are improved, we suspect that the desire to build stocks and the requirements of their neighbor will keep them active in the market"

"The U.S will have competition, certainly in the early part of the marketing season from the EEC, but the need for wheat exists," he continued

He noted that China and India are other important factors in the world wheat market

Laserson emphasized the demand forecast can be filled only if the grain is there and only if the grain trade is permitted to fill it

"We cannot absorb any further disruption of the marketing effort. The export activity is vital domestically and necessary internationally for the wheat producer Without that market, he has no choice but to reduce his output and raise prices"

Laserson called for enlightened joint action among all elements of the grain industry

"We must stop the growth of parochialism in self-serving special interest groups and work instead toward cohesive policy positions"

"The industry must truly be part of the decision-making process, playing a more dominant and useful role in the shaping of its own destiny in the world food marketplace," he concluded

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

The Delmarva Poultry industry is keeping a stiff upper lip in the face of some difficult economic problems. It's hard to smile when it hurts, and that's just how most of the broiler people feel right now.

They've been losing money for several months, and it doesn't look as though they'll turn the corner until at least the end of the year.

To appreciate the dilemma they're in, you have to understand a little about the business. In economic terms, it's called a vertically integrated industry.

What that means is that a few firms control virtually all broiler production, processing, and marketing on the peninsula. These firms own just about everything that's involved in producing chickens. That includes processing plants, feed mills, truck fleets, hatching facilities, and research farms.

The only thing they don't own are the chicken houses where the broilers are raised. Those belong to a lot of farmers who take care of chickens on contract with the integrators, and who are paid on a pre-determined schedule for their efforts.

So when we say the broiler industry is losing money, we're really saying that seven or eight companies are losing money. One insider told me there's no way any one of them is losing less than a nickle a pound on every chicken that's produced. And some are losing more than that.

When you consider that total broiler production on the peninsula will exceed 400 million birds this year and each chicken will weigh about four pounds, you're looking at a lot of nickles. And those losses are shared by relatively few companies

Before you become too alarmed about the state of the industry, you should also consider that the industry went through a time of prosperity, several years, in fact, when broiler profits were quite good. Whether they saved any of those profits for the eventual hard times is uncertain, but my source says that's not the nature of the industry.

In the good times they expand and improve, so there usually isn't much cushion to carry them through loss periods.

The broiler industry hasn't always been organized this way. What we now have is the result of almost 60 years of evolution, starting in a little chicken house in Ocean View, Delaware, in the early twenties when Mrs. Wilmer Steele decided to sell all of her young chickens as fryers rather than keep them for her laying flock. That was the documented birth of the broiler industry.

From there it grew and spread throughout the country to its present state of a multibillion-dollar industry with reportable production in 21 states.

The backyard flocks of the twenties gradually grew into the feed company-owned flocks of the forties and the processor-owned birds of today.

There was a time when farmers bought young chicks, raised them, and sold them to the highest bidder.

Then came a period when the feed companies arranged for contract growers with the companies providing the feed and the birds, while the farmers provided the houses and the labor. At the proper time, they were sold to a processor.

Hard times, expansion, good business sense, a lot of things changed that too. A few companies now take huge losses and remember the good times of yesterday.

Under the arrangement, Delmarva's broiler industry has been a dominant factor. Compared to other areas around the country, the Delmarva peninsula ranks fourth in total production behind Arkansas, Georgia, and Alabama.

It produces more birds than Texas, California, Pennsylvania, and a bunch of other states.

The industry employs more than 17,000 people, has an annual feed bill of almost 340 million dollars and uses virtually every bushel of corn and soybeans that can be raised here on the peninsula, plus some more that must be brought in.

Some say the broiler industry is unique in the way it's organized. Others have said it's just ahead of its time, that other farm enterprises will eventually go the way of broilers. Some are predicting already that hogs will become part of a vertically integrated system in the not-to-distant future, with the small producers left without a market.

The Delmarva Poultry Industry raised almost $283,000 in its annual fund drive concluded recently. That's about $20,000 more than its goal and a considerable accomplishment, considering the staggering losses the industry is currently suffering.

But the stiff upper lip prevails and in the words of DPI president Paul Twining, Jr., "We must aggressively continue to promote the superior aspects of chicken as a staple in the American diet. Chicken is one of the most economical, nutritious, well-balanced, versatile meats available to the consumer."

What about the future for the industry? Everybody seems optimistic. My source feels most processors will start showing a profit by the end of the year.

He also thinks one or two from that handful of companies might not make it through the crunch.

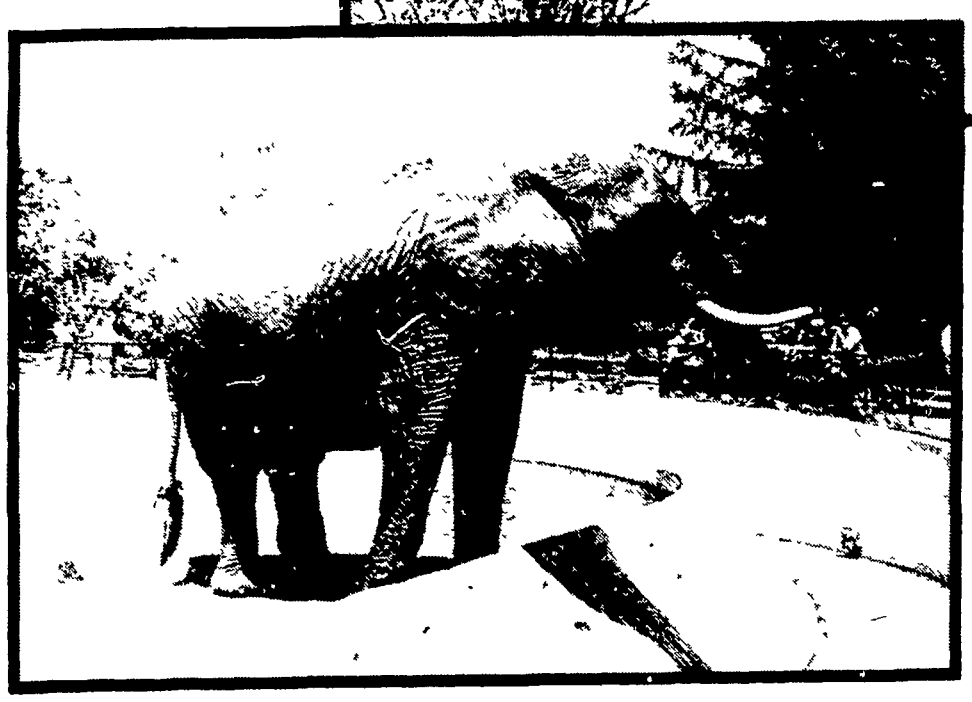
Flamingos show off their perfect balance as they dine or dream on one leg.



Ivory tusks, thick skin, and an incredible trunk, make this African elephant ready for the wilds of her native environment. At the national zoo, she delights visitors with a water show, cooling down her mammoth body with a "trunk" shower.

Lancaster Farming goes to the zoo

BY SHEILA MILLER

WASHINGTON, D.C — This marks the first official holiday weekend of the summer. And, if you find you don't have any field work to do, and can find someone to fill in for you at milking time, you might want to take a trip to the national zoo

In the first of a summer series on day-tripping Lancaster Farming will take a look at some places to visit in the area that don't require an overnight stay, or more than a tank full of gas to get there and back (depending on what type of car you're driving)

Our nation's capital, complete with legislators, monuments, and the White House, leaves most of us in awe The thoughts of fighting the hustle and bustle of the big city is a turn off for most

But, armed with a city map, anyone can find a trip to Washington D C. a pleasant experience. Just imagine the sense of accomplishment to find that you're driving past the Jefferson Memorial, Washington Monument, U.S D.A building built of old red bricks, on past the President's residence, and in a few short blocks, mid-city, you pull into a piece of the country.

Nestled in the heart of our nation's busiest city lies an area preserved for wildlife called the National Zoological Park. Here, visitors can see the giant pandas, Sing-sing and Ling-ling, a gift to our country from China.

After watching the pandas munching on their bamboo dinners in teddy-bear fashion, you can hike along beautiful trails and watch white Bengal tiger soaking up the sun, an elephant giving itself a cool, refreshing shower with water sprayed from its trunk, or look into the big, soft brown eyes of a coquettish giraffe. And for those who don't believe there's anything funnier than a barrel of monkeys, the inhabitants at the zoo will convince you that's true.

The zoo management tries to help its visitors see everything. They have developed a five-trail system where all you have to do is follow either an elephant, zebra, lion, polar bear, or

A black rhinoceros takes his time to lie down next to his partner.

Wheat outlook favors large 1980 crop

WASHINGTON, D.C — Harvesting is underway on a record 1980 U.S. winter wheat crop estimated as of May 1 at 1.71 billion bushels. According to a Wheat Situation report to be released by the U.S Department of Agriculture, this is over 100 million above 1979's level and 70 million above 1975's all-time high

The report, prepared by USDA's Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service, notes that the increased production reflects the sharp expansion in acreage as last fall's adverse seeding conditions and dry weather have reduced yield prospects 2.6 bushels below 1979's record 36.9 bushels

With the absence of set-aside requirements and strong prices last fall, producers increased winter wheat plantings by nearly 5 million acres. Chances are two out of three that final 1980 production will be within 115 million bushels of the estimate.

Spring wheat growers — durum and hard spring — are in the process of seeding three million more acres than in 1979.

However, dry soil conditions and virtually no rainfall in the Northern Plains in the past month causes current prospects to be less than favorable For the total 1980 wheat crop, a repeat of 1979's record yields is unlikely but the eight million acres would be offsetting and another large wheat harvest is probable

With no set-aside requirement for the 1980 crop, all producers are eligible for loans, the farmer-owned reserve, target price protection, and the disaster payment program. Producers may place 1980 wheat directly into the reserve at the time that it is put under loan.

Improved winter wheat crop conditions here and abroad, expanded spring wheat acreage, and higher carrying charges have contributed to weaker prices over the past few months For much of 1979-80, market prices averaged about a dollar a bushel above a year earlier, but this difference narrowed significantly by early May.

Although current farm-prices are around $3.50 a bushel, the 1979-80 season average will likely be around $3 75, a reflection of large farmer marketings at early season higher price levels The 1978-79 farm price averaged $2.98 per bushel.

World wheat stock levels will be below year-earlier levels going into 1980-81, but prospects are favorable for larger 1980 world wheat harvests in all major Northern Hemisphere countries except India and China. As a result, total supplies will be sufficient to meet world consumption requirements. World wheat trade is expected to remain high in 1980-81 with U.S. wheat exports around last season's record 1.37 billion bushels.

Total disappearance of U.S. wheat during June 1979 - March 1980 was up from the same period a year ago. A 15-percent boost in exports and a slight increase in food and seed use has more than offset a sharp decline in wheat feeding.

Total wheat usage for 1979-80 will be a record 2.15 billion bushels, about matching 1979's near-record crop. Consequently, carry-over stocks will be virtually unchanged from a year earlier.

Farmer-owned reserve stocks and CCC inventory will isolate about 50 percent of the June 1 stock level from the market.

Delaware plans several marketing meetings

DOVER, Del — Lower prices coupled with larger grain supplies aren't likely to make farmers' marketing decisions very easy in 1980. Proper timing is more important than ever this year. With this in mind, the Delaware Extension Service has planned a series of grain marketing sessions.

The first will be held June 3, from 7:30 to 10 p.m., at the Sheraton Inn in Dover.

University of Delaware extension crops marketing specialist Carl German explains that farmers first need to analyze the present grain outlook both nationally and locally. After studying these and other factors, individual growers should be able to develop an effective sales strategy for their 1980 crops.

The marketing session will cover two grower concerns: the current outlook for feed grains, and possible sales strategies. James R. Slay, account executive for Thomson McKinnon Securities, Inc., of Arlington, Va., will be one of the speakers.

"We plan to provide farmers with some sound practical information on which to base their own marketing decisions," says German.

Ram sale slated on June 7

WELLSBORO -- A total of 37 rams are listed for Pennsylvania's 4th Performance Tested Yearling Ram Sale to be held on Saturday, June 7, at 2 p.m. at the Whitneyville Fairgrounds, Tioga County.

The 84-day ram tests, which were concluded on April 30, are sponsored by the Pa. Dept. of Agriculture, Penn State and the Pa. Sheep and Wool Growers Association.

In a field of 16 Suffolks, the top ram, Morgan 26, owned by Elizabeth Morgan, 1916 New Holland Pike, Lancaster, finished the test with an average daily gain of 1.31 lb. and a weight per day of age of .72 lb.

Of three Corriedales in the test program, the top finishing ram, Bow 40, owned by Ben and Mary Bow, R1 Annville, had an average daily weight gain of .73 lb. and a weight per day of age of .51.

Among six Hampshires, the top ram, Carolair 142, owned by Carolair Farm, R1 Knoxville, had an average daily weight gain of 1.06 lb. and a weight per day of age of 64 lb.

For the second time since the beginning of the Ram Performance Tests, a Cochranville breeder had the highest indexing Shropshire ram. Warn Menhennett's ram 662 topped the Shrops with an average daily gain of .99 lb. and a weight per day of age of .59 lb. Ran 662 is a triplet. According to Menhennett, of R1 Cochranville, the dam is the highest indexing ewe in his flock of purbred Shropshires. The sire was the 1977 winner of the performance test.

In the Southdown breed, Nittany Ram 79-65, owned by W. L. Henning, 718 W. Nittany Ave., State College, finished with an average daily gain of .67 lb. and a weight per day of age of .43 lb.—DA

Del. students form agronomy club

NEWARK, Del. — Thirty University of Delaware students with a special interest in agronomy have joined together to form a new student organization. The Delaware Agronomy Club will affiliate with the Student Section of the American Society of Agronomy

The club was officially chartered on March 26, 1980, after 14 Delaware students attended a Regional Agronomy Club Conference at Purdue University, March 21-23.

David Bartenfelder represented the Delaware students in a speech contest held at that conference His topic was "A Seed So Small, Yet So Large."

The purpose of the Agronomy Club is to offer its members practical knowledge and experience relating to agriculture The group is research and service oriented

As its first service project, the club took part in Ag Day, the annual open house sponsored by the various student groups within the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Agronomy Club students prepared a plant identification exhibit, served samples of roasted soybeans and soybean dip, and answered visitors' questions about crop culture

Officers of the club are Don Messick, Wilmington, president; Kenneth Wicks, Middletown, vice president; Judith Wright, Wilmington, secretary; Al Krupski, Peconic, New York, treasurer; and Harris Martin, Berwyn, Pa., recorder.

Two members of the University of Delaware department of plant science faculty serve as advisors to the newly chartered organization. Merle R. Teel serves as Senior Advisor, and Donald L. Sparks as Junior Advisor. Advisors serve two-year terms, with the Junior Advisor becoming the Senior Advisor during the second year.

Next year Professor Leo J. Cotnoir plans to organize a soil-judging team within the Agronomy Club. The team will compete in regional and national soil-judging events

IF YOU CAN FIND AN ENGINE THAT USES LESS FUEL THAN A DEUTZ, BUY IT.

Air cooling lets a Deutz engine warm up faster and operate at a more efficient combustion temperature There are less exhaust emissions and more power on less fuel Users report savings of 20 to 40% over water cooled diesels And 100% direct air cooling eliminates the major source of down time — the water-cooling system No radiator No water pump No hoses No cavitation No freeze ups Deutz air cooled diesels — 5 to 500 bhp crowned crane's trail. Their foot prints are painted on the paved paths.

The management estimates it takes about four hours for a visitor to hike all five trails, covering slightly over three miles. This, of course, varies for each individual depending on how much time is spent looking at and reading about the different birds, mammals, and reptiles that call the zoo their home.

Admission to the zoo is free, but there is a $2 parking charge. The management advises visitors to try to get there before 10:30 a.m. in order to be assured of a space because parking is limited.

The zoo, located in northwest Washington, D.C., has its main entrance in the 3000 block of Connecticut Avenue; or you can enter at the junction of Harvard Street and Adams Mill Road.

The zoo animals love to get visitors year around. The only day they take a break from the tourist rat-race is Christmas day

From April 1 to the end of September, the park opens its doors to the public at 6 a.m. and closes at 8 p.m. The animal buildings open at 9 a.m. and close at 6:30 p m The rest of the year, the grounds open at 6 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. and the buildings open at 9 a.m. and close at 4:30 p.m.

One temptation that any visitor to the national zoo must overcome is the urge to feed the animals. Posted all over the zoo are signs which read "All zoo animals have controlled diets, do not feed them." The zoo managers explain that the wrong food could make the animals sick, and they encourage the visitors to watch the animals being fed by the keepers.

No matter what your age, you can have a fun and learning experience at the zoo.

The food given to the animals is apparently good enough for humans, at least that's what one orangutan must have felt This shaggy, red-haired ape startled some zoo visitors.

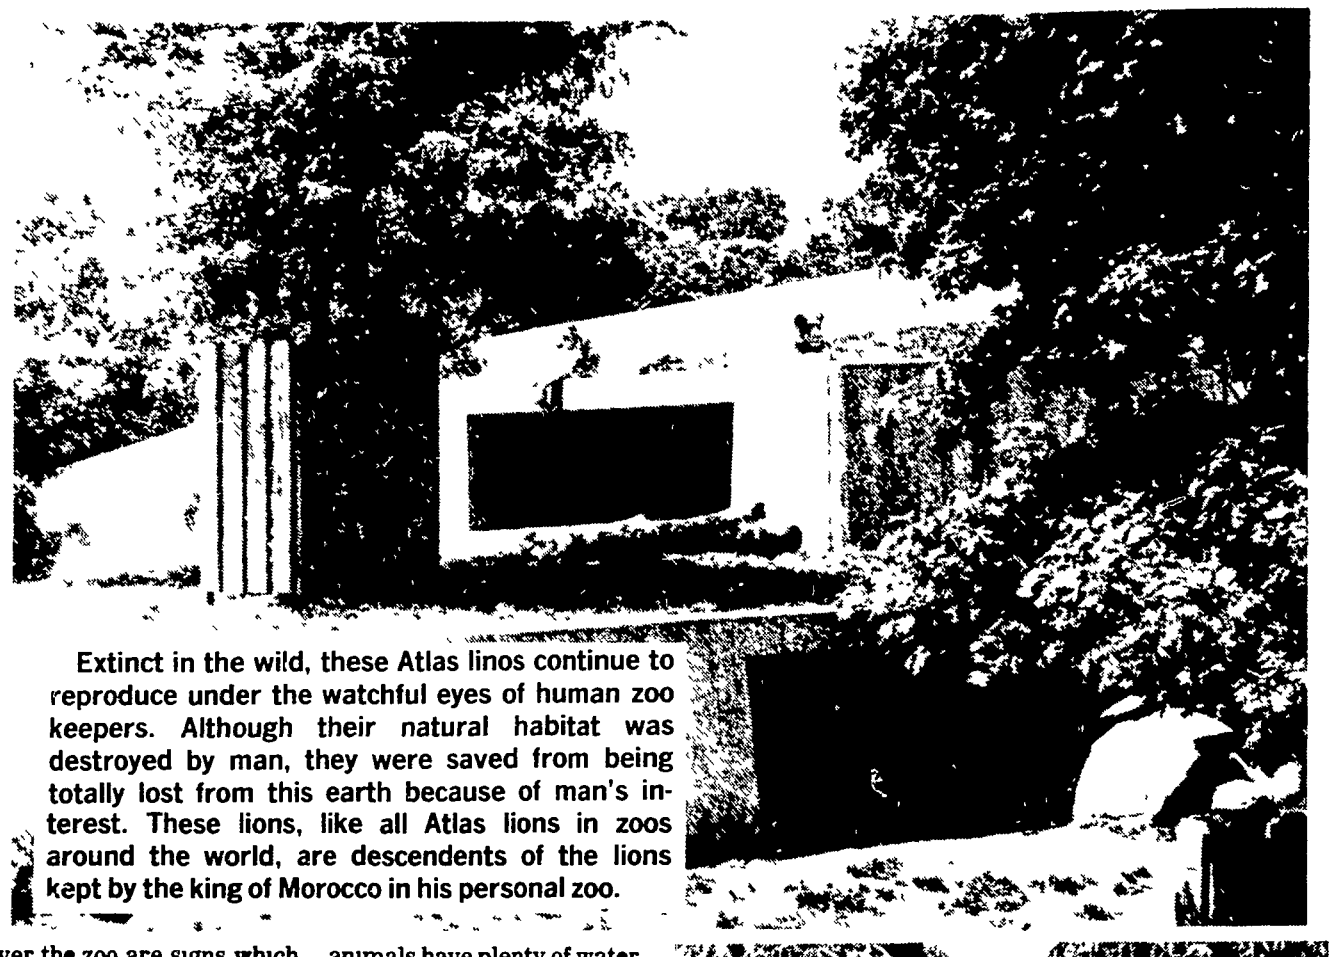
After thoughtufily surveying the crowd of humans, he threw them an orange he had just been dining on. The crowd appreciated his generosity, but he only give them the peel.

The zoo management loves animals, but it forbids any pets from coming to the zoo. If any visitors to the zoo leave their pets in the car, the zoo authorities require them to make sure the animals have plenty of water and ventillation.

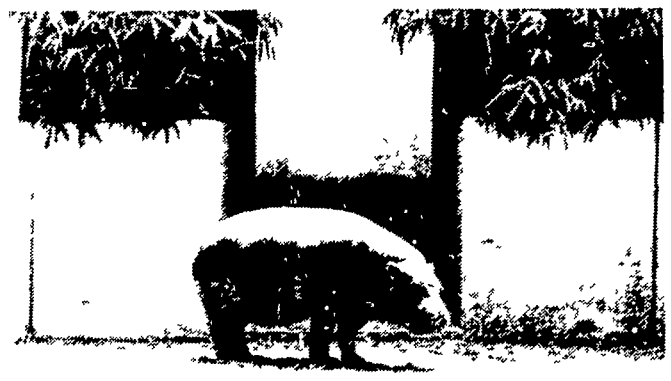
Young and old can come to the zoo for fun and learning Care has been taken in the layout of the zoo so that those individuals that are handicapped can enjoy the animals and a day out at the zoo, too.

So, if you're looking for something to do this weekend, consider a trip to our nation's capital for a glimpse of animals other than cows, pigs, or chickens it's easy to get to, and takes about three hours of interstate driving from the Lancaster area.

Have a safe and enjoyable trip, and a good holiday.



Extinct in the wild, these Atlas linos continue to reproduce under the watchful eyes of human zoo keepers. Although their natural habitat was destroyed by man, they were saved from being totally lost from this earth because of man's interest. These lions, like all Atlas lions in zoos around the world, are descendents of the lions kept by the king of Morocco in his personal zoo.



This pygmy hippo basks in the Washington D.C. sun, oblivious to the hustling humans on the other side of his pool.

Resource inventory underway in Dauphin

HARRISBURG — A natural resource inventory is presently underway in Dauphin County, announced Joel Myers, District Conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service in Dauphin County. This inventory includes the evaluation of present land use as it relates to the loss of valuable topsoil, he said.

Specific items being taken into consideration are stream bank erosion, erosion on construction sites, the loss of soil on farm land, timber potential and the evaluation of wildlife habitat.

This broad base inventory is one of the first to be undertaken in Pennsylvania The study is jointly sponsored by the Dauphin County Conservation District and SCS in cooperatin with Penn State. Information for the evaluation of land use and our natural resources is being taken from approxiately 300 locations in Dauphin County. Each of these locations includes a 107 acre block and 3 specific locations within each block.

To eliminate any bias in the selection of locations, a computer program designed by the Iowa State University was used to determined all inventory sites.

The study when completed will provied detailed county information. This resource information will be made available to numerous agencies involved with conservation and land use within Dauphin County. It will provide a sound basis from which to direct conservation and natural resource related programs, said Myers

Field work for the inventory is presently underway and will be completed by September, Myers added Initial results of the study are expected to be completed early in 1981.

NPPC against imports of canned hams

DES MOINES, Ia. — The National Pork Producers Council is seriously considering filing a countervailing duty or antidumping complaint with the U.S. government against canned hams and shoulders.

This move is a result of continuing significant increases in importation of pork from certain Eastern European countries, according to NPPC Executive Vice President, Orville Sweet. There is every indication these imports are heavily subsidized by the governments of these countries, he said.

"These subsidized or dumped imports from Eastern European economies cannot help but further contribute to the severe economic crunch U.S. pork producers are now facing," Sweet said.

While overall imports appear to be running about the same as in 1979, imports from Eastern European countries are now more than 65 percent of total imports, rising from 50 percent two years ago, he added.

For the past three years, imports from Eastern European countries, particularly Poland, Hungary and Romania, have increased.

In 1979, Poland replaced Denmark as the major importer of canned hams and shoulders to the U.S. In the first two months of 1980 imports from Poland increased 26 percent over the same period in 1979.

Imports from Hungary have increased 18 percent and imports from Romania have increased 52 percent.

"There are indications these countries are cutting their prices in order to follow increasingly lower U.S. prices," Sweet said. "These decreases come at a time when hog prices in the U.S., in real terms, are at their lowest point in history.

We feel these imported canned hams and shoulders are trading unfairly particularly when pork producers throughout the U.S. are not only suffering losses due to depressed prices, but at the same time are paying higher prices for equipment, feed and other costs necessary to produce market hogs," he explained.

"Pork producers believe the U.S. government has an obligation to require other countries to play by the same fair trade rules that U.S. producers are required to follow. Subsidized or dumped exports violate not only U.S. law but also international agreements governing rules of international trade," Sweet concluded.

USDA buys 11 million pounds of pork

NEW YORK — On April 21st the U.S. Department of Agriculture reopened its program to purchase canned pork in an effort to stabilize and improve prices for hog producers.

"The increased supply and the declining price trend for pork presented an opportune time for USDA to buy part of the red meats needed for schools in the 1980-81 school year," said Carol Tucker Foreman, the assistant secretary of agriculture.

To date, the USDA announced they have purchased 11.1 million pounds of pork, worth $13 million.

A spokesman for the department said the program is an open ended purchase arrangement designed for price support. "Hog prices haven't improved, so we're still buying."

Offers, which are accepted every Monday, must be made in units of 73,950 pounds. Packers or processors who wish to bid on the purchase program must be operating under Federal inspection so that the product may be shipped interstate.

Vendors must certify that all meat or meat products delivered to USDA originated from U.S.-produced livestock and meet other Food Safety and Quality Service purchase program requirements.

Del. produce growers to get newsletter

NEWARK, Del. — Commercial fruit, potato, and vegetable growers in Delaware have a new newsletter.

Called "The Diamond Stater," its purpose is to keep producers aware of new cultural practices, chemicals, management and marketing techniques affecting the crops they grow.

According to University of Delaware extension vegetable specialist Mike Orzolek, the monthly publication will also serve to keep growers aware of the programs and activities of the Delaware Vegetable Grower's Association.

Information for The Diamond Stater will be supplied by extension specialists, county agents and researchers at Delaware and other universities.

Among other things, the first issue includes information on strawberry weed control, blacklight trap reports, and planting tips for the five types of sweet corn now available.

To get your name on the mailing list, contact your county extension office in Newark 302/738-2506, Dover 302/678-4675, or Georgetown 302/856-5250. The publication is free.

Western Pa. milk order changes to be voted on CORAOPOLIS — Under a U.S. Department of Agriculture final decision, payment, pooling, and other provisions of the Eastern Ohio-Western Pennsylvania federal milk marketing order would be changed.

Herbert L. Forest, dairy official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the amended order still must be approved by at least two-thirds of the market's dairy farmers if the order, as changed, is to go into effect.

Producers will vote in a referendum to determine approval.

Forest said this final decision is virtually the same as the recomended decision published in the March 20 Federal Register. The proposed amendments are based on a public hearing held in Coraopolis, Pa. last August.

One major change in the present order provisions would be that the advertising and promotion assessment would be based on the average price that handlers pay farmers for their milk instead of the fixed rate now provided.

This change, Forest said, would increase the assessment to nine cents per hundredweight from the current rate of five cents. The change would not affect the amount consumers pay for milk in the market order area. The change was designed to keep pace with the constantly increasing cost of operating the program.

Another major change in payment procedures is to eliminate the requirement that the market administrator collect all handler obligations and then pay producers. This imposes an added cash flow burden on handlers buying milk directly from producers.

Not recommended was a proposal that would have eliminated the market administrator paying cooperatives directly. Forest said that the current procedure, in effect since October 1978, had corrected a serious deliquency problem with handler payments to cooperatives and should be continued.

Copies of this final decision may be obtained from the Market Administrator, Myron R. McKinley, Box 30128, Cleveland, Ohio, 44130 or the Dairy Division, AMS, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Farm news service to begin on TV

LITITZ — Farm and agricultural news will be a regular early-morning part of the live, twenty-four-hour-a-day news coverage of the Cable News Network when CNN begins to be offered to U.S. cable systems following CNN's premiere Sunday, June 1 at 6 p.m. Eastern Time.

CNN promises by the immediacy and the thoroughness of its coverage to change the way in which Americans are informed about domestic and global events and issues.

From the moment it is launched, CNN will present continuous news and possess an unprecedented capability to "go live" anywhere in the world where major news is breaking, and to do follow-up pieces at any hour of the day or night.

Beyond its hard-news capabilities, CNN will offer a wide variety of special features, human interest stories, celebrity interviews, talk programs and consumer reports.

CNN's Farm Reporter John Holliman, Jr , who has been Associated Press Radio's agricultural reporter for the past six years, will produce and report CNN's farm and agricultural news.

During the early morning hours, Holliman will present brief reports of farm news and weather at regular intervals. Following his early morning farm segments, Holliman will cover, each day, stories of interest to farmers and consumers; stories about such topics as price support hearings, farm protests or consumer protests, grain embargos and garin surpluses, pesticides and herbicides, and the food and drug issues.

His reports on these events will be included in newscasts throughout the day

"The economy is the big story of the decade," said Holliman, "and CNN's coverage will strive to make clear the connection between farmers and consumers. Problems affecting farmers inevitably will affect consumers' pocketbooks, and CNN will have the time and resources to explore this crucial relationship fully."

CNN's farm and agricultural coverage will include breaking news stories, farm weather reporting and forecasting, current farm prices, in-depth interviews and influential agricultural leaders and policy-makers, and feature material from around the country that explores different aspects of the American agricultural scene.

Holliman will operate from CNN's Washington bureau, which will be staffed by seventy-five electronic journalists, executives, and technical persons.

Six cited by Longwood for ornamental work

KENNETT SQUARE — Six people have received Fellowships for study in the Longwood Program in Ornamental Horticulture of the University of Delaware.

This graduate Program, in cooperation with the renowned Longwood Gardens in Kennett Square, seeks to train managers for botanic gardens, display gardents, arboreta and other public horticultural institutions around the country.

Students come from diverse backgrounds, but all are required to have a degree in horticulture or a closely related discipline, or considerable experience working with plants and the public. All Fellows selected this year have worked in public horticulture.

Timothy Hohn, an extension agent in Georgia, is a graduate of Michigan State University and has an additional baccalaureate degree in communications from Western Michigan University. In addition, he has had nursery experience at a variety of levels in several parts of the country.

Robert Hyland, a horticulturist working in historical landscape restoration at Old Salem Village in North Carolina, comes to the Program with an A.B. in botany and a master's degree in recreation horticulture, farming, and food service, as well as experience with arboretum collections.

Ray Kuipers, the first student to come to the Longwood Program from South Dakota, has an undergraduate degree in horticulture with a minor in economics. He has had experience in commercial horticulture, farming, and food service, as well as experience with arboretum collections.

Susan Lathrop, at present an intern working with the education department at Morris Arboretum in Philadelphia, has worked with the care of plant collections as well as in landscape design and in language training. She has undergraduate degrees from Wellesley College and the University of Delaware, and graduate degrees from Wellesley and Smith College.

Charles Thomforde, a Swartmore graduate in biology, has held several internships at the Morris Arboretum and numerous private gardening positions.

Joseph Townsend graduated from Kenyon College in history and religion in 1971. Since that time he has trained with the Davey Tree Expert Company and served as a district manager in Hilo, Hawaii and San Francisco, California. More recently he has been a greenhouse manager for J. F. Styer in West Chester.

These Longwood Fellows will spend the next two years training at the University of Delaware and Longwood Gardens.

Exotic fuels, do they work?

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Recent articles have extolled the merits of using vegetable oils, sunflower oil, or soybean oil in diesel engines.

Claims of equal or improved performance as compared to diesel fuel have been made about various oils. However, a flag of caution has been raised by agricultural engineers at Purdue University.

Engine oil samples from a new diesel tractor which had been burning a fuel mixture of 50 percent soybean oil and 50 percent diesel oil were examined. Globs of oxidized soybean oil were found.

Purdue University agricultural engineers report "all vegetable oils, including soybean oil, are very unstable compared to mineral oils. In other words, they easily oxidize or form gums and varnish-like substances.

"This process of oxidizing is speeded up when exposed to heat. Just a small amount of unburned fuel (in this case, half soybean oil and half diesel fuel) leaking by the piston rings will quickly oxidize in the hot engine oil.

"This problem would be even worse in a new engine in which there is more blow-by, before it is broken in."

If you're going to use vegetable oils, including soybean or sunflower oil, Purdue University advises:

Use it only in a well broken in engine; change oil often, at least every 25 hours; and watch the oil pressure constantly.

Use it in gas turbine engine where lubrication oil and fuel cannot mix.
